Welcome to Madrid

WELCOME TO THE CITY where, in one way or another, everyone's from somewhere else. Welcome to a city that greets all arrivals with open arms, where making friends is just a matter of having a night out, or heading down to buy bread each day from the local market. Welcome to the city of fresh air, city parks with ponds and statues you'll find nowhere else, with cycle lanes that criss-cross the neighbourhoods, and outdoor terraces where you can enjoy a drink with friends in any season. Welcome to the good-weather city, where the sun shines almost 365 days a year and umbrellas live at the back of the wardrobe. Welcome to a city packed with art and culture from all over the country, with impressive museums and charming galleries, open-air music festivals and markets. Welcome to the city of delicious food such as squid baguettes and cocido stew. Welcome to Madrid! ■

Bike lanes or sharing the road?

We debate the best ways for cyclists to move round the city

Bikes should go on the road, like any other vehicle

Bicycles have been experiencing a surge in popularity over the last few years with more and more Madrileños using them to get round the city. Whether it's for going to work or enjoying a weekend ride, bike lovers are using this sustainable and healthy mode of transport every day. And even though it's possible that more locals have been encouraged to take up pedalling by the expansion of the city's network of dedicated cycle paths, there are roads where a lack of space or the street layout makes it impossible to add bike lanes. That's why the place for bicycles, like any other vehicle, is on the road. Cycling on the street – in lanes with special speed restrictions in place for traffic – allows you to get anywhere in the city. It also saves the authorities money, because rather than having to create special bike lanes, they just have to paint the 30km/h speed limit on the tarmac. In that way, it raises awareness that cyclists are road users just like any other, too.

Dedicated lanes provide better protection and safety

Now boasting more than 300km of cycle lanes, Madrid is becoming a city more and more open to getting around by bike every year. The restoration of the bicycle as a means of transport forms part of the plans to improve the quality of life and even the very idea of the city promoted by Madrid's institutions. A large part of its success is down to the dozens of kilometres of dedicated cycle lanes that have been, and continue to be, created across the whole city, which allow cyclists to feel safe and protected on their journeys. What's more, the city's many hills are no longer an excuse not to adopt this environmentally friendly and healthy way of getting about, given that the BiciMAD public rental service's bikes have small electric motors that help you get up the steeper slopes. There are also other rental services that allow you to leave their bikes parked on any street.

SUMMED UP

Curious city stats

It's not easy to get a good idea of what it's like to live in a city and enjoy its culture when you've only just arrived. So why not try examining it from a mathematical perspective? If there's one thing Madrid's not short of, it's statistics and figures. Such as, for example, 232, the number of cinemas in the city. Or 249, the number of metres high the tallest building in Spain, La Torre de Cristal, stands in Paseo de la Castellana. Even 0 is significant, as kilometre 0 in Puerta del Sol is the point from which all of Spain's roads are measured. On top of that, you have 6 theme parks in and around Madrid and 67 theatres distributed throughout its neighbourhoods, which you can reach from its 301 metro stations. Best of all, though, are the city's 2,710 hours of sunshine each year, which you can use to wring every last drop out of living here. ■ Marta Bac

'In Madrid you can discover what makes you happy'

How did you end up living here?

In 2014 I went to a university in Boston and they chose me along with 30 other high-performing students to study abroad for a year. That six months marked my life, not just because it was the first time I had been in Europe, but also because those months in Madrid helped foster my passion for a career in international relations and diplomacy. Finally, the semester turned into two years as I decided to extend my stay, and I ended up remaining.

Would you recommend Madrid to your friends?

To my friends and to the seven billion inhabitants of the planet! Madrid has everything. I would tell those who think New York is the city that never sleeps that they haven't experienced everything Madrid has to offer those who visit it. It's a city that can help you find yourself and discover what makes you happy in life.

What are the best and worst things about the city?

The Iberian ham is the best. Strolling around the Retiro park in autumn, walking along Gran Vía when it's lit up at night, getting lost in Malasaña's colourful streets, picnicking at Templo de Debod... Not to forget the EMT bus service – which for me is the best public transport system in Europe. The worst thing about Madrid? I don't think there's anything bad to say. Well, the heat in July and August.

What do you do at the weekend?

I love exercising along Madrid Río and going out for tapas. Also going early to the Rastro and even doing a language exchange. ■

Madrid secrets

There are many books that tell you how to best explore the city in a day or a weekend. But a place as full of life as the Spanish capital hides many corners that you won't find in any guide. We reveal some of them here – because sometimes what's most essential is often invisible

The beach in Malasaña

→ San Andrés, 1.

Right in the middle of the Malasaña neighbourhood there's a beach – with sand, a bar and everything – where you can hide out from the cold in winter and chill out in summer. Opened in 2004 and remodelled in 2014, the Ojalá restaurant's basement is a makeshift Ibiza-style space where you can enjoy a few beers with friends and relax at the low tables with comfortable cushions and dimmed lighting. Both homely and exotic at the same time, it even features a hanging garden and fluorescent tables. And the food is delicious, especially the weekend brunch.

The secret garden

→ Sacramento, 7.

No. 7 Calle Sacramento hides one of the most closely guarded treasures in the centre of Madrid – perhaps because it remained a secret until 1972. That was when the high walls around the Bernardas convent that had protected the Huerto de las Monjas were demolished to construct some housing blocks. By luck, the garden, which was originally devoted to growing vegetables by the nuns, remained intact and since then has been open to anyone who wants to visit it to enjoy a few minutes of peace and quiet amid the hustle and bustle of Madrid.

In the middle of Malasaña is a beach, with sand, a bar and everything

The Montera oasis

→ Montera, 37.

Among the swarm of tourists and gold-buyers on this central Madrid street, you'll find a small oasis where you can escape the hubbub of the city. Climb up to the top floor of the Salvador Bachiller store and you'll step straight into a fairy-tale tearoom where you can enjoy coffee or breakfast, munch on a lunch-time snack, or sip a mojito after a hard day's studying. Open in winter and summer, it's the perfect place to sample a great selection of cheeses, Iberian hams, gyozas, tacos, salads and other delicious fare. Its brunch is also in high demand.

The only sound you'll hear is birdsong in this peaceful oasis

A door to the sixteenth century

→ Cervantes, 11.

“Que mi jardín, más breve que cometa / Tiene solo dos árboles, diez flores / Dos parras, un naranjo, una mosqueta”. (“That my garden, more fleeting than a comet / Has only two trees, ten flowers / Two vines, an orange tree and rose hips”). Four hundred years later, the birdsong and the scent of blossom and roses in poet and playwright Lope de Vega’s garden in the Casa Museo Lope de Vega in the Barrio de las Letras remain almost as they were. The garden is now the stage for recitals, summer film screenings and concerts at sundown – all of them free, all of them intimate.

little boxes, they're ideal gifts

Flowerly treats

→ Plaza Canalejas, 6.

Madrid's most traditional dish might be its hearty cocido stew, but these violet candies are the sweeter side of its culinary identity. They're made with violet essence and served with petals and there's only one place in the capital where you can buy the real thing: La Violeta, a modest wooden-fronted shop that has been selling them since 1915. They're so good, so the story goes, that King Alfonso XIII gave them as presents to both his wife and his mistresses.

Drinks at the art gallery

→ Corredora Baja de San Pablo, 17.

You'll find plenty of art shops and galleries in the city centre, but none quite like Kikekeller, a space where everyday objects and art merge. But the premises doesn't reveal its real secret until the store lights go off for the night and one of the city's trendiest little bars comes to life in its backroom, where Madrid's in-crowd meets up to sip expensive tipples in an exclusive atmosphere.

a drink
in the relaxed, trendy
ambience

The underground bunker

Paseo Alameda de Osuna, 25.

This was one of Madrid's best-kept secrets until it opened to the public in May 2016. Given the code name 'Posición Jaca', this subterranean bunker in the Parque de El Capricho housed the military HQ of the Central Republican Army during the Spanish Civil War. For 80 years it remained a silent witness to the conflict, but now visitors can head 15m below ground and discover what was once one of the city's most important Republican command posts. Measuring 2,000m<sup>2</sup> and able to withstand bombs of up to 100kg, the well-preserved development is a unique slice of history and tickets to see it sell out fast.

The empty pedestal

Parque del Retiro.

Along the Paseo de la Argentina, popularly known as the 'paseo de las estatuas' (statues' walk), in the Retiro park stands a series of sculptures dedicated to the kings and queens of Spain of various eras. There were originally due to be placed on the cornice of the Royal Palace but they ultimately ended up here. There are a total of 14 pedestals, but just 13 statues – one of the pedestals remains empty. The missing monarch could be Alfonso VII, whose figure may have become so deteriorated from being moved around that it couldn't be put on show. One other secret few know about is that of the 13 remaining statues, two are of the same king: Sancho IV, nicknamed the 'Brave'.

El cementerio de los ingleses

Comandante Fontanes, 7.

This graveyard may not be well known in Madrid, but there's a lot of history among its tombs. The English cemetery was built in Carabanchel to bury non-Catholics and its first occupant was Arthur Thorold, a young British man whose tombstone is shaped like the legendary sword Excalibur. Other names found here include Emilio Huguenin Lhardy, founder of the eponymous Madrid restaurant; three members of the Loewe family, who started the luxury fashion label; Rita Garrido, the first actress of the Teatro La Latina, as well as several members of the Bauer clan, one of the most powerful families in nineteenth-century Madrid.

The statue is Antonio Santín's tribute to Madrid's first female student

The first female student

→ Pez, 42, corner San Bernardo.

Madrid is so full of statues that if you're not careful you can mistake them for people sweeping the street in Jacinto Benavente or taking a walk in Plaza San Ildefonso. But the one with the best story is that of Julia, a young student leaning against the stone wall by the Palacio Bauer. The bronze statue of a barefoot girl in a skirt and blouse and carrying her notes is artist Antonio Santín's tribute to the first woman to attend the University of Madrid, in 1848, who eluded the ban on female students at the time by disguising herself as a man.

Madrid's Sistine Chapel

→ Puebla, 22.

Entirely covered in frescos, the interior of the Church of San Antonio de los Alemanes is well worth a visit. Painted by Juan Carreño de Miranda and Luca Giordano, among others, the scenes tell the stories of the life and miracles of St Anthony of Padua. The temple is part of the hospital that Philip III created in the seventeenth century to attend the sick and Portuguese pilgrims, which is why it was previously known as San Antonio de los Portugueses before it became the hospital for Madrid's German community.

A secret among the almond trees

→ Alcalá, 502.

Almost at the end of Calle Alcalá, you can find a park that few Madrileños or tourists ever visit. La Quinta de los Molinos would just be another green space in the city if it weren't for its more than 6,000 almond trees, which are a delight for all five senses when in bloom throughout February and March. The pink-and-white blossom takes over the gardens and their heady scent wafts over the walls into the surrounding area.

The oldest florist shop

→ Huertas, 2.

Located on the site of the old San Sebastián church cemetery is one of the best-kept secrets of the Barrio de las Letras: El Jardín del Ángel, a garden centre and florist founded in 1889 that claims never to have closed, even when a bomb almost destroyed the place of worship next door. To enter you pass under a sign bearing the slogan 'No dejes de soñar' ('Never stop dreaming'), and you soon realise there's something special about this place, even if you're not a plant lover. As well as selling beautiful flowers, it's a magical spot where you can relax admiring one of the century-and-a-half-old olive trees.

Byzantine strongholds

→ Gran Vía de Hortaleza, 48.

The streets of Madrid are full of surprises that can make even locals feel as though they're thousands of kilometres from home. One such example is the commanding golden cupolas atop the Church of Santa María Magdalena, a slice of Russia in the middle of the Hortaleza neighbourhood. Built in the Byzantine style, the temple opened in 2013, becoming only the second orthodox church in Madrid after the Greek Orthodox Cathedral of Santos Andrés and Demetrio (whose interior is also well worth a look). The same style of architecture can be seen in other buildings such as the German Friedenskirche (church of peace), a 'clandestine' church that combines Romanesque and Byzantine styles.

The prince's hideout

→ Plaza de la Paja, 6.

In a corner of Plaza de la Paja in La Latina, a brick wall guards a hidden garden, the best-kept secret of the Palacio del Príncipe de Anglona. The prince lived in the building in the nineteenth century, and loved walking round among the plants. Several stone paths lead to a small stone fountain at its centre, and there's an iron shelter and a pergola that's covered in roses in the spring. The whole place is shaded by large trees, while one of its corners provides good views of the neighbourhood.

20 great things to do

Here's our guide to the city's essentials – a score of must-do activities including partying, exploring, eating and more!

01.

Try the traditional Madrid cocido

A hearty stew of pasta, chickpeas, assorted cuts of meat and broth, cocido is Madrid's most popular traditional dish. Served in many of the city's restaurants, this is a speciality everybody should try and will probably love.

03.

Scoff chocolate con churros in San Ginés

This chocolatería first opened over a hundred years ago in a narrow street between Puerta del Sol and Plaza de Ópera. Today it's Madrid's most famous café for hot chocolate and churros – delicious deep-fried strands of dough perfect for dunking – and a meeting point for all sorts of partygoers trying to summon the strength to get to bed at the end of a long night out.

02.

Take in a show

It's no surprise that Gran Vía is known as the 'Spanish Broadway'. Most of the musicals that come to the city play on its grand stages, from 'The Lion King' to 'Dirty Dancing'. So let the magic of theatre carry you away...

04.

Go shopping

It doesn't matter what your budget is, Madrid has a shopping experience for everyone. From the cheap high-street stores on Gran Vía to the alternative shops in Malasaña and the exclusive boutiques on the Golden Mile, this city is perfect for retail therapy.

05.

Explore Gran Vía

Running from the famous Metrópolis building to Plaza de España, this wide street is the main tourist route through the city. Lined with shops, bars and even a casino, it's over 1km long and has recently been remodelled. It's worth taking a moment to look up and admire its magnificent buildings and rooftop statues.

06.

See the skyscrapers

Madrid isn't a city of skyscrapers like New York, but it is home to an impressive quartet of vertigo-inducing towers. The Cuatro Torres (Four Towers) are: Espacio, PwC, Cepsa and the Torre de Cristal, which at 249m is Spain's tallest building. A fifth tower is now under construction and is due to open at the end of 2020.

07.

Go to a concert (or two)

The city's music scene is a perfect fusion of concerts by big-name international groups playing to audiences of 15,000 at the WiZink Center and gigs performed by alternative, underground and jazz musicians at intimate venues to just a handful of faithful fans. There's live music every day of the year so nobody has to miss out, whatever their tastes.

08.

Sample a squid baguette

This seafood sandwich is another traditional dish, though nobody quite knows why, given that the city is 300km away from the nearest coastline. But typical it is, and no self-respecting Madrileño (or visitor) goes long without eating un bocata de calamares somewhere around Plaza Mayor.

09.

Revel in the green zones

From city-centre parks such as the Retiro and the Casa de Campo to the surrounding woods and mountains such as the Sierra de Guadarrama, Madrid is full of natural treasures. What's more, it caters for every type of activity, from hiking in La Pedriza, skiing in Navacerrada or touring El Pardo, to name but a few.

10.

Take a selfie by El Oso y el Madroño

This statue of a tree-climbing bear is a well-known symbol of Madrid, and a meeting point for lost tourists and friends. Designed by Antonio Navarro Santafé, the sculpture is 4m tall, weighs 20 tonnes and sits in the Puerta del Sol.

11.

Enjoy a bird's-eye view

The Madrid skyline is one of the most beautiful in Spain, and the perfect place to appreciate it is the roof of the Círculo de Bellas Artes in Calle Alcalá. From there, you can survey the whole city, its great avenues, famous monuments and lush parks.

12.

Celebrate the local fiestas

Every summer, the celebrations dovetail into each other as the city's neighbourhoods mark the feast days of their local saints. From San Cayetano to the Verbena de la Paloma, concerts, dancing and fun are what it's all about. And don't forget the main fiesta for Madrid's own patron saint, San Isidro, on May 15.

13.

See the city's most famous buildings

From rationalism to neoclassicism, Madrid's architecture is a living story of the city's evolution over the centuries. Some unmissable examples are the beautiful Palacio de Longoria, the cupola of the Basílica de San Francisco el Grande and the impressive Palacio de Cibeles.

14.

Discover the Chueca neighbourhood

Madrid is a very gay-friendly city, but if there's an area that most embraces diversity, it's Chueca, where there are many shops, bars, restaurants and clubs aimed specifically at the LGBTI community. Madrid's annual Gay Pride festival is also centred on this area.

15.

Have a beer!

If Madrileños have a favourite way to spend an evening, it's enjoying a drink and a bite to eat with friends, which is perhaps why the range of food in the city's bars and restaurant is so wide. The weather is good enough for terraces to be open practically all year round and, from La Latina to Chamberí, there are always plenty of groups enjoying lively conversations over coffees, beers or something stronger.

16.

Admire the art

A wander along the famous Paseo del Arte is a compulsory part of any visit to Madrid. The Prado, Reina Sofía and Thyssen-Bornemisza galleries are the three epicentres of art and three of the most important museums in Spain. But don't miss out on the plethora of small galleries in the Barrio de las Letras and Salamanca districts, either.

17.

Cycle along Madrid Río

The relocation underground of part of Madrid's main ring road has given way to a large 10km-long park along the Manzanares river. It's a pleasure to ride or walk along its banks, where you can see children playing in its playgrounds and, if you fancy, stop for a break at one of the cafés on the way.

18.

Step on to kilometre 0

A small, easy-to-miss plaque just opposite the Real Casa de Correos in Puerta del Sol marks the spot where all Spain's roads begin, known locally as kilometre 0. Many locals have a photo of this small square of pavement with feet walking across it in an album somewhere, so make sure you get yours, too.

19.

Shop in the Rastro

Madrid's oldest and most famous flea market is a must-see for visitors. Every Sunday in and around Calle Ribera de Curtidores in Embajadores, dozens of stalls set up to sell second-hand clothes, vinyl, jewellery and just about anything you can imagine. Once done, head to a nearby bar to peruse your buys.

20.

Escape the centre

Stroll around the gardens at Monte del Pardo, visit the immense El Escorial monastery, or explore the Palacio Real de Aranjuez and its famous World Heritage gardens... There are numerous places worth seeing outside the city centre but still within the Madrid region.

Quinta de la Fuente del Berro

A magical idyll where the water bubbles over the falls, and the smell of freshly cut grass hangs everywhere. Two moss-covered stone staircases are obscured by the creepers on each side of the stream, and looking out over the lake, you feel as if a court of nymphs with flower crowns round their hair were singing in your ear. It's just a few steps from the M-30 and right next to the Torrespaña, but you'd never know it. → M: Manuel Becerra.

Garden city

Waterfalls, olive groves,
Tyrolean houses and peacocks –
Madridis full of incredible green spaces to explore

The pond in the Museo Sorolla garden is dominated by the Fountain of Secrets

← Olivar de Castillejo

A wild garden where sandy paths disappear among the blue-grey tops of the olive trees and the breeze tastes of eucalyptus. Napoleon camped here when this plot of cultivated land was on the outskirts of the city and it later became a favourite of intellectuals such as the poet Dámaso Alonso. These days it's only open to the public in summer, when there are concerts and open-air film screenings. → M: Cuzco.

↑ Museo Sorolla

Since he started painting gardens in 1906, Spanish artist Joaquín Sorolla always wanted to create one of his own. And when he got the chance, he designed this splendid example divided into three spaces inspired by the Garden of Troy in Seville's Alcázar, the Alhambra's Generalife and a final one centred on a pond. → M: Gregorio Marañón.

← Jardines del Campo del Moro

Seven centuries before Habsburg Queen Maria Christina began missing her Austrian childhood and ordered the construction of the gardens' Tyrolean-style house, Emir Ali ibn Yusuf had set up camp here in an ill-fated attempt to reconquer the city. Now you have to escape the straight-lined order of the fountains and flowerbeds, and venture into the undergrowth, far from the tourists, to awaken the memory of that event, as peacocks stroll tranquilly among the trees and paths. A unique space right next to the Royal Palace.

→ Jardín del Marqués de Casa Riera

So the legend goes, at the end of the nineteenth century, a man turned up dead next to the corpse of a woman. It was on that spot that the house of the Marquis of the Casa Riera was built, a luxurious mansion that would never be inhabited – just as, in turn, the house of his heir put up afterwards never would be, either. The spooky events earned the site a privileged chapter in the history of Madrid's cursed places. These days it has been turned into an office building with a small landscaped garden, pond and boxed hedges. No doubt you've passed by it a thousand times and not even noticed – it's situated just in front of the Círculo de Bellas Artes, hidden behind railings. →M: Banco de España.

The best of the barrios

Here's a brief guide to our favourite parts of Madrid's neighbourhoods, with everything from fiestas to history and monuments, plus how to get to each one

Lavapiés

This neighbourhood is a melting pot and symbolic of the fusion of ethnic identities and cultures that has happened in Madrid in the last few years. It's always been an unassuming place, inhabited, until the 1980s, by older people who lived in corralas – the corridor-style housing so typical of old Madrid. Nowadays, thanks to rents that are slightly more accessible than in other areas of the city and its multicultural character, it attracts a lot of young people who share it with neighbours of up to 88 different nationalities. Indian restaurants stand next to Arab barber shops and classic Madrid taverns. This neighbourhood is also famous for the San Lorenzo fiesta, which takes place every August, and for events like Tapapiés, a tapas route that is held in October, mainly in the bars and on the terraces of Calle Argumosa, one of the area's liveliest streets. Lavapiés also has cultural hotspots like Tabacalera, a place for collective cultural expressions, and Teatro Valle-Inclán, which is managed by the Spanish National Drama Centre.

→ M: Tirso de Molina, Lavapiés, Embajadores.

Sol-Gran Vía

Although it isn't a neighbourhood in the official sense, Sol is the true centre of Madrid, and Puerta del Sol is the starting point for the whole Spanish road network. It's a meeting place for locals and tourists alike, due to its location and the fact that it's a transport hub. The oldest building in the area is the former Post Office, known as Casa de Correos, which is now the headquarters of the Presidency of the Autonomous Community of Madrid. On December 31 hundreds of people gather in front of its clock tower to see in the new year. This square hosts a famous statue of a bear and a strawberry tree that appears on the city's coat of arms. It is also here that many of Madrid's most important streets begin, including Calles Mayor and Arenal and Carrera de San Jerónimo. Nearby lies one of the city's major shopping areas, Calle Preciados, which converges with Gran Vía, an icon of the city since its construction in 1910. It's home to cinemas, theatres, department stores and some of the city's most exclusive shops, as well as a number of striking buildings such as the Metrópolis and the Carrión, and Madrid's first skyscrapers, the Telefónica building and Torre de Madrid.

→ M: Sol, Gran Vía.

Chamberí

From hunting grounds to aristocratic residences, Chamberí has always been a neighbourhood in constant evolution. A traditionally stately suburb, with its wide streets and expensive apartments set away from the tourist crush of the city centre, in recent years Chamberí has become one of the city's most popular areas for eating out. And that's not only thanks to the revitalisation of Calle Ponzano – a must for all gourmet fans – but also due to the survival of the neighbourhood's traditional restaurants and taverns. Its architecture is also worth mentioning, embodied in squares like Plaza Olavide and Plaza Chamberí, as well as in cultural venues like the Teatros del Canal, the Museo Sorolla, the Geominero and Andén Cero, and its attractive shopping streets like Calle Zurbano.

→ M: Quevedo, Ríos Rosas, Canal, Iglesia, Islas Filipinas.

La Latina

Fun and tradition are the defining characteristics of this city centre neighbourhood. La Latina is part of old Madrid, blessed with winding medieval streets that are broken up by small squares like Plaza de la Paja, Plaza de San Andrés and Plaza del Humilladero. You'll find the remains of the city's ancient walls along with churches both large and small dotted haphazardly along its streets, as well as the Segovia viaduct and Puerta de Toledo, which mark the boundaries of the neighbourhood. Mercado de la Cebada, one of Madrid's largest markets, is the perfect combination of tradition and modernity. La Latina is a favourite place for a few beers at the weekend, or heading down streets like Cava Alta and Cava Baja for a vermouth and some huevos estrellados, a delicious combination of lightly fried eggs and crispy chips, at Casa Lucio. In addition to iconic spots like the Basilica of San Francisco el Grande, the Teatro de la Latina, Jardines de las Vistillas and Campo de Cebada, La Latina is famous for the Verbena de la Paloma, a traditional fiesta that's celebrated in August with music, chotis dances and much more.

→ M: La Latina, Puerta de Toledo.

Las Letras

Once home to some of the great writers of the Golden Age of Spanish literature such as Cervantes and Quevedo, the Barrio de las Letras also hosts interesting galleries and antiques shops, and part of the famous Art Walk that takes in the Thyssen-Bornemisza, the Reina Sofía and Prado museums as well as the CaixaForum cultural centre with its spectacular vertical garden. The neighbourhood's main thoroughfare is Calle Huertas, and on its pavements you can read quotations from great works of Spanish literature. It's home to tapas bars and party venues where young people gather at weekends for drinks with friends. Plaza de Santa Ana, with its large terraces next to the Teatro Español, and Spain's Congress building are other iconic spots. One of the major events to be held here is DecorAcción (in June), an enormous interior design fair in which the neighbourhood's shops set up street stalls selling decorative objects and antiques.

→ M: Antón Martín, Atocha, Sevilla.

Chueca

It's Madrid's main LGBTI neighbourhood and is known throughout the world for its tolerant and diverse atmosphere. What only 20 years ago was a decidedly marginal area has now been completely transformed, home to all types of bars, famous squares (Plaza de Chueca and Plaza de Pedro Zerolo), terraces, art galleries, cultural venues

(the Museum of Romanticism), impressive buildings (the Palacio de Longoria and the headquarters of the COAM architects' association), trendy and gay-oriented stores (Berkana bookshop), and gourmet markets where you can eat tapas (Mercado de San Antón). During the day it's perfect for a stroll and popping into the shops on Calle Barquillo and Calle Hortaleza. At night, you can dine in one of the area's numerous restaurants, which cater for all tastes and budgets. Afterwards, sample the Chueca nightlife, which is among the liveliest in Madrid, with plenty of gay bars that are also hetero-friendly, including Delirio, Fraggel Pop, Why Not, the rooftop at the Oscar Room Mate hotel, and the famous Studio 54.

→ M: Chueca/Gran Vía.

Malasaña

Next to Chueca, Malasaña owes its name to Manuela Malasaña, the heroine of the May 2, 1808 uprising against the French forces then occupying Madrid. Led by Luís Daoíz and Pedro Velarde, the event is important in the neighbourhood because its focal point was the old Parque de Artillería de Montealeón, located where the Plaza del Dos de Mayo now stands. In the square, you can see an arch from the old military barracks, as well as a monument paying tribute to the two captains. What was once the neighbourhood of La Movida, the cultural and social revolution that emerged in Madrid in the 1980s, is now the city's trendy hipster area par excellence. It's a paradise for foodies and fans of organic produce, and full of modern businesses such as cool barbers, cupcake stores, and vintage cafés that sit alongside traditional bars and markets such as the Mercado de Barceló, which now boasts a new modern building and an attractive terrace. Strolling around Malasaña, and especially along its famous shopping street, Calle Fuencarral, is to experience a young, cosmopolitan neighbourhood full of life and a party atmosphere. It's also a good place for a night out, home to legendary venues such as Penta and Tupperware.

→ M: Tribunal, Noviciado, Bilbao.

Tetuán

Tetuán is made up of six different areas: Bellas Vistas, Cuatro

Malasaña is one of the city's trendiest areas, a paradise for foodies and hipsters

Caminos, Castillejos, Almenara, Valdeacederas and Berruguete, and is divided into two very distinct parts by Calle Bravo Murillo, one of Madrid's most important shopping streets. The area bordering Paseo de la Castellana includes the Azca business complex, one of Madrid's major financial centres and home to several skyscrapers, including the Torre Picasso. Here you'll also find expensive apartments, the Moda Shopping Centre and the Calle Orense shopping street, alongside the Nuevos Ministerios metro and train station, and the world's biggest Zara clothes store. The other part of the district, which lies on the opposite side of Calle Bravo Murillo, is known as the Little Caribbean because of the large number of Dominican immigrants who've made their home there, opening cybercafés, hairdressers, supermarkets and restaurants, all buzzing to the sounds of reggaeton, bachata and trap. This is a decidedly ungentrified area with more affordable housing and smaller, cheaper shops and businesses.

→M: Cuatro Caminos, Alvarado, Estrecho, Tetuán, Valdeacederas.

Carabanchel

This area began as one of the city's most traditional working-class districts, although it's recently evolved into a trendy neighbourhood where alternative and emerging artists have set up their workshops near Calle Urgel and Calle Oporto and organise cultural activities such as Artbanchel each May. It's an area that offers some real treats for visitors, including the Palacio de Vistalegre and La Finca de Vistalegre, an old recreation ground that in its period of greatest splendour boasted two palaces, a navigable river, fountains and peacocks. It's also a favourite haunt of heavy metal and hard rock fans, who head to clubs such as Grotto 77 and Sala Live, and there's a wide variety of eating options, too, from fried chicken to Peruvian and Colombian specialties served up in the restaurants opened by members of the neighbourhood's immigrant communities. It's another of the city's emerging areas, as it's located near the centre, bordered by Madrid Río and Casa de Campo, but still offers affordable housing. Finally, don't forget that it's also home to both the Pradera and the Ermita de San Isidro, the epicentre of the festivities honouring Madrid's patron saint each May 15.

→M: Marqués de Vadillo, Urgel, Oporto, Carabanchel, Vistalegre.

Moncloa

Moncloa is a stately neighbourhood where family houses sit alongside halls of residence for Complutense University students. It's a nice area to walk around, especially along Paseo de Pintor Rosales, the Templo de Debod and the Parque del Oeste, which is linked to Casa de Campo via the Teleférico cable car. It begins at Plaza de España, where you can see the Edificio España and the Torre de Madrid skyscrapers, and finishes at the famous Faro de Moncloa, one of the city's best-known viewpoints. The neighbourhood is a perfect blend of residential and student life, with shops, hotels, parks, monuments and an active university social scene, especially in the Argüelles area. The Museo del Traje, the Museo de América and the Museo Cerralbo are also to be found in this appealing area.

→M: Plaza de España, Moncloa, Argüelles.

Salamanca

This is Madrid's most exclusive neighbourhood. It was built in the nineteenth century by

The Usera neighbourhood is a must-visit, especially during the colourful Chinese New Year celebrations

the Marquis of Salamanca as a residential area for the city's aristocratic and bourgeois classes. Nowadays, it's also the focus of business and commercial activity. This is where you'll find Madrid's so-called Golden Mile, where streets like Calle Serrano, Calle Goya, Calle Ortega y Gasset, Calle Claudio Coello and Callejón de Jorge Juan are home to luxury fashion, accessory and jewellery brands. Among its biggest attractions are the National Archaeological Museum, the Juan March Foundation, the Carlos de Amberes Foundation, and the Lázaro Galdiano Museum, as well as leading art galleries and, of course the WIZink Center, the city's biggest venue for concerts and shows. It's also home to some of the best restaurants in Madrid, including Zalacaín, Ramón Freixa and Kabuki Wellington.

→M: Serrano, Velázquez, Goya, Lista.

Usera

This neighbourhood in the south of Madrid was, until barely a decade ago, just one of the city's many working-class districts. But in recent years there has been an influx of Chinese immigrants who have transformed it into Madrid's own Chinatown. Shops of all kinds with signs in Chinese have replaced the traditional haberdasheries and markets, and even the area's older bars now employ Chinese waiters. That makes it the best place in the city to try authentic oriental food at the plentiful restaurants with menus in Chinese offering specialties from little-known regions; happily, the high quality of the dishes is not reflected in the prices. It's a must-visit, especially during the colourful Chinese New Year celebrations.

Austrias

In its monuments, churches and palaces Madrid's most historic neighbourhood hides the secrets of the former monarchs who once inhabited them. Its name dates from the days when the Habsburg dynasty ruled Spain and Charles I ordered the construction of squares and monumental buildings in the city. Later on, under Philip II, work began to remodel the old Plaza Arrabal, which became the present-day Plaza Mayor. From the Almudena Cathedral to the Plaza de la Villa and the Teatro Real, the architectural beauty of this area attracts a large number of tourists who gaze in wonder at the work of the ancestors of today's city residents. The area's restaurants serve traditional cocido madrileño, though there are also more modern places, such as the remodelled Mercado de San Miguel, while the Jardines de Sabatini provide a haven for tired sightseers who can rest on the shaded benches beside its fountains.

→ M: Sol, La Latina, Puerta de Toledo.

Vallecas

Vallecas is another working-class neighbourhood that is emerging as an alternative area to visit, thanks to its rich mix of different cultures. It's located a short journey from Atocha by public transport and its main thoroughfare stretches from Puente de Vallecas to the Avenida de la Albufera, a street lined with small, cheap shops that ends at the Cerro del Tío Pío (or 'seven tits park', to give it its rather vulgar local nickname), which affords some spectacular views of the city. At night, Vallecas is Madrid's heavy metal capital with a large number of bars and clubs playing hard rock. In terms of food, you'll find a bit of everything here, from traditional taverns to Ecuadorian and Chinese cuisine. The neighbourhood has grown so much that, as well as Puente de Vallecas, the Villa de Vallecas old town also now has its own new housing development. One of the area's most popular celebrations consists of the simulation of a naval battle, which sees people take to the streets with water pistols and balloons. It's also a big footballing area, home to Rayo Vallecano's ground.

→ M: Villa de Vallecas, Congosto.

Arganzuela

This district is made up of the Acacias, Paseo Imperial, Legazpi, Palos de Moguer, Delicias and Atocha neighbourhoods. Its historic buildings are almost all in the rationalist, neo-Mudéjar and industrial styles, including the old Matadero de Madrid slaughterhouse in Legazpi, which is now one of the city's leading cultural centres, and the Museo del Ferrocarril, which holds the monthly Mercado de Motores flea market. Other recommended spots include Madrid Río, with its green spaces, iconic bridges and kids' playgrounds, and the Parque de Enrique Tierno Galván, which is home to the Madrid Planetarium and some of the city's best music festivals such as Tomavistas and Brunch-in The Park.

→ M: Delicias, Legazpi, Arganzuela-Planetario.

Conde Duque

This central residential neighbourhood has been lent a new lease of life thanks to the activity generated by its main attraction: the Conde Duque Cultural Centre. This former barracks has been transformed into a base for the area's most important cultural activities: it's a summer cinema, an exhibition space, a theatre, a show hall and more. Like other neighbourhoods in downtown Madrid, its older establishments now compete with newly opened businesses. But they all share similar characteristics: friendly service, artisanal products a long way from those you find in the big high-street chains (there's no Zara here) and thoughtful decoration. You'll find bars, restaurants and shops you'll be hankering to go back to, even before you leave them, as well as everything from vinyl and menswear to gourmet food stores and art galleries. The best thing to do is surrender to its streets and discover everything the area has to offer.

→ M: Noviciado, San Bernardo, Plaza España.

ABC

A practical glossary of typical words and expressions from Madrid

MAD!

Daily life in Madrid means learning its language and forms of expression. The city is famous for its colloquialisms and very peculiar slang that set it apart from other Spanish towns, and knowing some of these words will help you feel part of the city, and give the locals a happy surprise

Molar

Molar is something that's said a lot, especially by young people. It means that something pleases you greatly, and is more informal than the normal Spanish verb gustar. For example, if you see something nice, that surprises you or makes you smile, the thing to say is ¡cómo mola!, ¡me mola!, or ¡mola mucho!, instead of ¡cómo me gusta!, which sounds less natural. It can be used for almost anything, and a simple mola is all you need to express that something is cool.

Mazo

If mola is 'I like it', mazo is 'a lot'. So to say you 'like something a lot', it's mola mazo – one of the most common local colloquial expressions. The word mazo has several meanings, though, so you need to be careful. It's also a mallet, and can mean a disappointment or a negative action. Dar un mazazo is to disappoint or upset somebody, or cause them a problem. But the most common slang use of mazo is to mean 'much' or 'a lot'.

Guay

This means 'cool', and it's used when Madrileños like or are impressed by something. It's a word that's been used by several generations of locals but continues to be popular and very common.

A pachas

In Madrid a pachas is used when you share something with someone else or several other people. For instance, when you're eating out with a group of people and the time comes to pay the bill, you might hear someone say 'pagamos a pachas', which means 'let's split it (equally) between us'. You can also make a bet a pachas, which means sharing any winnings. Or when you go for drinks, you can use a pachas to mean you're splitting the price of the rounds among everyone.

Tío/tía

No, in this case it's not your aunt or uncle. Among young people, the words tío and tía can be used at random at the end of almost every sentence, in the same way you might say 'mate', 'man', or 'love'. Tío is directed at men and tía at women, and phrases like ¿Qué pasa tío? and ¡Joé, tía! are common parts of the everyday informal conversations you hear on the street.

Bocata

The typical Madrid sandwich is made with a small baguette; ask for one by saying Un bocata, por favor. A key expression for ordering tapas in the city

Flipar

Also common is flipar, or flipar en colores. A synonym of alucinar, it expresses (huge) amazement.

Pasar

You don't always use the verb pasar when you're talking about throwing a ball to someone or entering a room. If you hear a Madrileño say yo paso in a conversation, it probably means they don't fancy doing whatever's being talked about – they're passing on it. It's the most informal way to decline an invitation or say you don't want to join in with something. It's also used in card games: to pass on the betting for the round if your hand isn't good.

No te rayes

No te rayes is a phrase that has nothing to do with lines (rayes), but is instead used to tell someone not to get annoyed, upset or stressed by something. If a friend has a problem, you can use the expression to try to make them feel better or to play down the situation. If someone's worried about an exam, for example, you could say, tío, no te rayes, to calm them down and cheer them up. But no te rayes if you take a while to get the hang of it!

Currar

Ir a currar is a less formal way of saying ir a trabajar – 'to go to work'. El curro means el trabajo in Spain, but watch out, because 'Curro' is also a shortened form of the name Francisco.

Chulapo

You might not hear this word every day, but you should know it. The term chulapo comes from the Spanish zarzuela light operas of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, particularly the well-known 'La Verbena de la Paloma'. It's the name of the typical suit worn at some of Madrid's most popular festivals, but it's also used to describe an archetypal Madrileño – a bit arrogant and brazen, but amusing and polite. You will see chulapos and chulapas at the celebrations for Madrid's patron saint, San Isidro.

Terraceo

Terraceo is one of Madrileños' favourite activities in spring and summer, when bars and restaurants set out their tables and chairs in the street and people meet up for beers in the open air. Terraceo means ir de terrazas – that is, to visit different bars and areas to enjoy a few alfresco drinks.

Tapas

The term tapas covers a wide variety of appetisers and snacks in Spanish cuisine, which are served in most bars or restaurants with a drink. The practice of sampling them on the move (bar, eat and drink, new bar) is called a tapeo or ir de tapas. You're always sure to find a group of friends ready to find that bar that serves up the tapas for free.

Castizo

According to the dictionary, castizo describes people or things that accurately represent the characteristics of their race, country, city and so on. Anything castizo is the most typical, the most rooted of a city's customs or culture. Madrid is the source of this expression, as its traditions have lasted over the years. Chotis (traditional Madrid dance), cocido madrileño (stew), callos (tripe), la verbena de San Isidro and la virgen de La Paloma (local festivities), churros con chocolate (fritters with chocolate) are all truly castizo traditions.

Movida

This word became famous thanks to the Movida madrileña, the city's '80s countercultural movement. Movida refers to a mess, confusion or ruckus, and ¡Qué movida! means the same as Vaya lío ('what a mess!').

Liarla parda

Whenever there's a fight, heated argument, serious swindle or something outrageous happens, you'll hear the phrase liarla parda ('to mess up') to refer to something that someone has done that has caused serious harm to a third party. For example, if you leave the tap running in your flat and cause a flood that collapses the whole block, then you have liado parda ('messed up badly') because of your absent-mindedness. It's much better if you never have to use this expression, but you should know it. Just in case.

How to ask for beer:

Caña

This is the most common way of serving beer: in a glass of around 200ml, well poured from the tap and frothy.

Doble

A doble in Madrid is a caña in a bigger glass, also on draught and very cold.

Botellín

This is the smallest of the bottled beers, formerly known as a botijo or quinto.

Tercio

A tercio is a 330ml bottle of beer.

Clara

A clara is the Spanish version of a shandy, a caña of beer mixed with lemonade. It's a very typical drink on the terraces of Madrid in summer.

Mini

A mini is a big (plastic) cup of draught beer that holds almost a litre of drink. It's normally shared and served at local festivals.

Jarra

Draught beer in a half-litre chilled glass. It must be served very cold.

Who's who?

Madrid is a cosmopolitan city that welcomes people from all over the world. It's the perfect melting pot where those from different backgrounds live together and consider themselves de facto Madrileños whether they were born here or not. These are a few of the city's most renowned residents

Dabiz Muñoz

→Chef

In 2007 he opened DiverXO, a restaurant that has broken both culinary and aesthetic barriers. His ability to maintain his Michelin stars – he's had three since 2013 – is recognition of an iconoclast who has raised the profile of the Madrid restaurant scene in record time. David Muñoz, known as Dabiz Muñoz, is, in short, a chef with his feet on the ground who makes you touch the sky. You can also try his food in the more casual setting of StreetXO.

Pedro Almodóvar

→Film director

The idol of the Movida madrileña movement of the 1980s, Almodóvar achieved the success he now enjoys at his 60-plus years with films such as High Heels. He's won two Oscars – for best original screenplay for Talk to Her and best foreign-language film for All About My Mother – and despite his success in Hollywood, his filmography remains intimately linked with Madrid, turning the city into another one of his movie characters. His last movie, Pain and glory, is a masterpiece.

Pedro Almodóvar has won two Oscars, but his films remain intimately linked with Madrid

Blanca Portillo

→Actress

The 56-year-old Madrileña is one of Spain's most respected actresses. She's worked with Pedro Almodóvar on two occasions, in Volver (which earned her a prize at Cannes) and in Broken Embraces, and has won prestigious awards such as the National Theatre Prize and the Silver Shell at the San Sebastián Film Festival. She's also one of the biggest names in today's theatre, as both an actress and as a director, and has even headed up the Mérida Classic Theatre Festival.

Penélope Cruz

→ Actress

One Oscar, three Goyas, a Bafta and a David di Donatello. The number of awards won by Spain's best-known actress is incredible. Bigas Luna put her on the map with Jamón, jamón and from then on it's been success all the way. The partner of another great Spanish actor, Javier Bardem, Cruz has worked with top directors from both Spain and the US, from Almodóvar to Woody Allen, and has even played Donatella Versace in a series.

La Bien Querida

Ana Fernández-Villaverde, AKA La Bien Querida, is one of the most persuasive voices in Spanish music; her last record, Brujería (Witchcraft), cast a powerful spell on us. Here she talks about her passion for Madrid.

Could you describe the feeling of falling for Madrid when you first arrived?

I loved Madrid from the first moment I set foot in it. I came from Bilbao for a year and I stayed. I've now spent more years living here than in my home city.

In what corner of Madrid have you spent the most time partying till dawn?

My house is where I've spent the most time partying late. I like my friends to come round.

What are your favourite concert venues?

I like El Sol, Ochoymedio and Joy Eslava a lot. All of the concerts where I launched my records have been parties. Madrid audiences are the best. I always say it.

If you get lost any time, where might we go looking for you?

I like the centre. The Barrio de Las Letras, Plaza Mayor, Ópera... I don't go very far.

ALFREDO ARIAS

Boa Mistura → Urban art collective

These urban artists have a gift: they can listen to the city's heartbeats and paint them on every wall. Their first murals are in Calle San Dimas, which they painted in 2010 after moving from Alameda de Osuna. But their biggest work is in Mercado de la Cebada. They're also behind the decoration of the zebra crossings in the city with verses of poetry written by locals for the initiative 'Versos al paso'.

Alejandro Amenábar

→ Film director

Amenábar was born in Santiago de Chile, but his family moved to Madrid in 1973, when he was barely one year old. He's a leading figure in raising the visibility of the LGBTI community, having leapt to national fame with the film Tesis, which won seven Goya awards. International success came later with The Sea Inside, which earned him a best foreign-language film Oscar, and The Others, starring Nicole Kidman.

Luz Casal

→ Singer

Having sold more than five million records, Luz Casal is one of Spain's most revered singers, both inside and outside of its borders, and especially in France, where she was awarded the city of Paris's top medal in 2010. With songs such as Piensa en mí and No me importa nada, she has conquered a whole generation extending into the present day and has featured on the soundtracks of films by Almodóvar and Amenábar, among other moviemakers.

Carmen Machi

→ Actress

Sitcom Aída transformed her into one of the best-loved actresses on Spanish television, but this Madrid actress has shown she is capable of not only making us laugh – in films, too, such as Ocho apellidos vascos – but also of conquering the stage in dramas such as Antígona and Cronología de las bestias. Three Max prizes and one Valle Inclán theatre award pay testament to her constant presence on the capital's stages and her receipt of the city of Madrid's Gold Medal.

↑ Irene Escolar

→Actress

A furious performer on stage but sweetness personified in real life, Irene Escolar is one of Spain's most promising young actresses. She won the Goya film award for best new actress in 2016 for her role in Un otoño sin Berlín and has been nominated at the Max theatre awards for her performance in Federico García Lorca's El Público. After that came Blackbird and Hermanas, the plays that have taken her to new heights.

Javier Marías

→Writer

Aged 66, Javier Marías is one of the most prolific Madrid writers of his generation. A member of the Spanish Royal Academy, Marías sets many of his novels in his native city, including his most recent work, Berta Isla. Every year his name appears in the running as a potential Nobel Literature Prize candidate. He's also the author of numerous essays, as well as columns for newspaper El País.

Los Javis

→Directors, writers and actors

Javier Calvo (left), 28, and Javier Ambrossi, 35, are the duo of the moment – mentors, almost, to a generation of youngsters. They started out as actors but soon tried their hand at directing with stage musical hit La llamada. The work had started out on the fringe but went on to become a benchmark of Madrid theatre, even being turned into a film. The pair's most recent creation, the series Paquita Salas, is very funny, while their performance classes in Operación Triunfo were the best thing about the return of the TV talent show in 2017.

JARDINES DE SAN FRANCISCO

In La Latina, right next to the Basílica de San Francisco el Grande, lies this park and viewpoint dedicated to growing and showing roses. It's located on the site of the former San Francisco convent, which fell into ruins and was demolished in the mid-twentieth century. The land remained unused until 2007, but has now been transformed into a pretty and still relatively unknown spot, where you can share a romantic moment sat on a bench among the flowers.

→ Gran Vía de San Francisco, 29.

M: Puerta de Toledo.

RADIO ME

A laid-back atmosphere (there are lively themed nights with different DJs) and international cuisine are the main draws at this restaurant in the centrally located Hotel ME. The bar, which features views over Plaza Santa, is open into the small hours every day of the week so you can always enjoy a romantic date lasting long into the night. Who can resist dinner and cocktails under the stars accompanied by a panorama of the city? If you're more of a daytime person, don't leave without trying the full brunch on Sundays – it's ideal for sharing.

HAMMAM AL ÁNDALUS
This oasis of calm is located just a few minutes from busy Puerta del Sol. With thermal baths at different temperatures, the relaxing atmosphere and peace envelope you as soon as you walk through the door. The ceilings, walls and murals are inspired by Moorish design, and you can complete the experience with a massage for two.
→ Atocha, 14. M: Sol.

REAL JARDÍN BOTÁNICO
Right next to the bustle of Paseo

del Prado, this green and leafy space with more than 30,000 plants from all over the world makes it easy to imagine that life in the city has been put on hold and love is floating in the air. The gardens were created in 1781 for King Carlos III by Juan de Villanueva and botanist Gómez Ortega.

High fashion, low cost

The best Madrid stores for picking up unique designer clothes and homeware without breaking the bank

La Intrusa

If you're into retro style and designs inspired by bygone eras, be sure to pay a visit to La Intrusa's two stores in Malasaña and Barrio de las Letras. Its dresses have a certain romantic air, as do its accessories, with many designed by young Madrid creators and entrepreneurs.

→ Corredera Alta de San Pablo, 33. M: Tribunal.

Dooc

Dooc is one of those shops that won't leave you indifferent. Typical items include its origami animal heads, ready for hanging on the wall like ecological hunting trophies; ceramic pieces resembling pigs; zebra urns and Italian firm Seletti's famous monkey and mouse lamps. This menagerie of designs sits alongside illustrations by Galician artist Lara Lars and the in-house-created neon lights.

→ Atocha, 73. M: Antón Martín.

Luciolé

Though it looks like a sweet shop, this store has nothing to do with confectionery. It sells DIY cotton fibre lamps: choose the size and colour you want – there are more than 50 different types – as well as the kind of cable and support, and even the bulb. The result? Informal and colourful lamps with a minimalist air.

→ Hortaleza, 106. M: Alonso Martínez.

La Oficial

It's hard to resist the items in this La Latina store – colourful china plates, bowls and dishes all hand-painted in Portugal and regularly brought in by its two owners. From there, they've also imported the tradition of selling their wares by weight, just like in the old days.

→ Ruda, 9. La Latina

Peseta

The fabrics determine the creations that come out of this small workshop full of prints, patchwork items and buttons in the Conde Duque neighbourhood. Everything here has passed through the hands of its creator, a lover of handicrafts capable of designing clothes, accessories and all kinds of home decorations using fabrics from around the globe. There's another shop in Barrio de las Letras.

→ San Vicente Ferrer, 8. M: Tribunal.

DearTee

If there's one item of clothing that will never go out of fashion and that (almost) everybody loves, it's t-shirts. This international firm, which set up shop in Madrid in 2017, knows that well, which is why it's specialised in this wardrobe basic with the aim of creating a hit. It's main thing is brilliant prints with edgy messages and you'll find it hard not to find at least one here to suit your taste, whatever your interest.

→ Colón, 11. M: Chueca.

El Moderno

This Malasaña concept store provides a perfect, affordable initiation into the world of decoration and design accessories. Because if there's one thing it can brag about, it's having a great selection of functional furniture, unique homeware and all manner of jewellery. You can't buy objects like these everywhere, and certainly not without spending a fortune.

→ Corredera Baja de San Pablo, 19. M: Gran Vía.

Walk With Me

These guys' illustrated maps of different Madrid and Barcelona neighbourhoods might ring a bell, but we're recommending them here because they've now opened a store in the Barrio de las Letras with a collection of accessories – backpacks, wallets and functionally designed bags – all handmade from recycled leather.

→ León, 30. M: Antón Martín.

GET THE MAX OUT OF MADRID

10 reasons to study in Madrid

01.

The climate

Forget your umbrella, bring your sleeveless T-shirts for summer, and a good coat and scarf for winter. That's how we'd sum up the weather in Madrid, which is located 655m above sea level. In general, it's a dry climate, with little rain throughout the year, very warm summers and cold winters. Spring and autumn pass almost unnoticed.

02.

The culture

Madrid is one of the richest cities in Europe for art and culture. As well as home to Spain's most important art gallery (the Prado) and one of the world's most-visited modern art museums (the Reina Sofía), it's also has an endless line-up of quality theatre, concerts of all genres every night of the year, and outstanding film seasons devoted to both mainstream and arthouse cinema.

The Madrid character

In reality the city is home to few authentic 'gatos' – Madrileños with three generations of parents and grandparents all born the city. Instead almost everyone here has a family home town where they can escape to in summer. That's why Madrileños have an open and welcoming character. Always ready to help you out, they help make you feel right at home.

04.

The language

Why not learn to speak a language used by over 500 million people? Spanish is a Romance language that comes from spoken Latin and isn't difficult to learn, even more so if you're going to be using it in your day-to-day life. Although you shouldn't have too many problems communicating in English in Madrid, we recommend daring to express yourself in Spanish. You're bound to get the hang of it right away!

05.

Shopping

From international fashion labels to artisan workshops, the city has a wide range of shops where you can buy anything you need. What's more, in contrast to many European cities, in Madrid you can shop in the supermarkets or other stores until 9pm or even later. The department stores open from 10am to 10pm, including on Sundays.

06.

Food

It's no secret that Spanish cuisine is one of the best in the world. And Madrid is the perfect place to sample it. Here you'll find everything from establishments with three Michelin stars (DiverXO) to the oldest restaurant in the world (Casa Botín), as well as a wide variety of places to try typical Madrid dishes such as cocido (a chickpea and meat stew), discover fusion cuisine and enjoy tapas.

Leisure

If you wanted, you could find a different activity to suit your interests and budget every day of the week in Madrid. From going out for drinks to learning how to dance salsa or taking a guided bike tour through the city, the choice is vast. And that's to say nothing of the popular festivals, fairs and markets held every weekend in the city, especially during the warmer months.

09.

Prices

Life in Madrid is not excessively expensive compared with other European capitals. Transport and accommodation are well-priced in relation to places such as London, Berlin or Paris. What's more, prices are lower in the outlying neighbourhoods than in the city centre. In tourist areas, though, they tend to be much higher.

10.

Safety

Madrid is 'an extraordinarily safe city', according to the authorities. The crime rate in the capital has dropped in recent years and more and more police officers from the local, national and Civil Guard forces are watching over our safety. Common sense is really all that's needed to enjoy the city without running into trouble.

07.

Transport

Madrid has a wide public transport network, which is the best way of getting around the city. The metro, bus and local Cercanías train service are the means that locals use the most to get from A to B. Those who opt to go by car will have to learn how to negotiate the main M-30 ring road around the city centre. Cycling is also becoming an increasingly popular way of moving around.

Madrid Student Welcome Day!

What is it?

The Madrid Student Welcome Day (MSWD) is the city's official welcome event for all students who have chosen the city as the best place for their education. The aim is to inform students in one single event about all the advantages Madrid has to offer them so that they can get the most out of their stay here.

¡PRIZES!

All kinds of prizes will be raffled off during the event, including football tickets and trips

What will I find there?

Every year, between 26,000 and 30,000 foreign students and around 45,000 Spanish students from outside Madrid arrive in the city. That's why a meet-up event like this is so necessary. In one single place on one single day, you'll be able to easily access all the information you need, as well as take part in all sorts of diverse activities. Don't miss it!

¡FREE!
All the activities held during the MSWD are completely free

Where and when?

The Galería de Cristal at the Palacio de Cibeles, home of Madrid City Council, is the location of this meet-up for students who've just arrived in the capital. The 2019 event takes place on October 12 from 11am to 10pm (the 2020 date is yet to be confirmed). Although entry is free, you need to sign up beforehand on the event website: studentwelcomeday.com. The nearest metro station is Banco de España.

It's the ideal occasion to meet new people

Accommodation

Finding the perfect place to live while you're studying in Madrid is one of the most important things you'll have to do. We offer a few words of advice and a selection of available flats, halls of residence and more!

Five tips

Before deciding on where to live, there are some important factors to bear in mind

FIRST, YOU NEED to be sure about where in the city you want to live. Every neighbourhood is different and that's why you should do your research. You need to be sure about the type of accommodation you want to live in during your stay in the city. Do you want to share a flat or live in a hall of residence? You also need to be clear about how much you're prepared to pay according to the facilities you want. Fourth, you need to know where to start looking – there's a wide range of websites and accommodation agencies. And, finally, it's important to look over your rental contract thoroughly before you sign it.

You need to be sure about the type of place you want to live in and who you're sharing with

INTERVIEW

'There are lots of accommodation options'

Adrian Lawlor, 22, moved from Ireland to study at the ICADE faculty of the Universidad Pontificia de Comillas, a centre he chose 'for its reputation'. Adrian had been studying Spanish back home and continued improving his language skills during his stay in Madrid.

How did you find accommodation in the city?

The truth is that it was easier than I thought because the Citylife Madrid office in Gran Vía helped me a lot.

Where did you live during your stay? A shared flat, a hall of residence...?

I lived in a flat share with other students and it was really great, I had no problem at all.

How would you rate the accommodation available in Madrid?

In Madrid there are many options, the range is quite wide... so in that respect I'd rate it highly. What's more, I'm from Dublin and, compared to the prices there, rents are much lower here.

What advice would you give to a student coming to live here?

I would tell them that it is best to live with other students, either from Spain or abroad, to learn about different cultures, other languages and different customs. ■

UNIVERSITY HALLS OF RESIDENCE

Education

The city offers a wide range of educational services, from public and private universities that compare favourably with those elsewhere in Europe, to language centres

Quality line-up

Madrid has a large and varied range of educational facilities adapted to all students, whether they're from Spain or elsewhere

A CITY AS cosmopolitan and open as Madrid could not be anything less in terms of its educational services. With six public universities, the city offers quality higher education comparable to that in other European cities. Throughout the year, these centres provide foreign students with special courses to help them learn Spanish, which are complemented by interesting cultural activities – though these aren't the only option for studying the language. On top of that, Madrid also has eight private universities, where fees are higher than in the public centres, which offer students all manner of degrees and diplomas.

Madrid has six public and eight private universities offering students all manner of degrees

INTERVIEW

'Prices are quite affordable'

'What I liked most about living in Madrid for a time was the safety and tranquillity I felt.' Twenty-nine-year-old Losvelys Phipps has no doubt about what she would highlight about the city. She came to Madrid from the Dominican Republic to study a master's degree at the prestigious Next International Business School.

Why did you decide on private education?

What most pushed me to make the final decision was that I got a full grant for my studies here in Madrid.

How do you think education in Madrid compares with that of other cities?

I haven't studied in other European cities apart from here, so it's hard to compare, but in general I think Spanish education, and specifically education in Madrid, is good. In terms of the prices of degrees, courses and other qualifications, I think they're quite affordable.

What advice would you give to someone coming to study in Madrid next year?

I would tell them to try to find a university or study centre highly specialised in the area that interests them. That way, the education will always be more suited to what they are looking for and they will get more out of it.

Facilities

With numerous libraries, sports centres and swimming pools, Madrid has facilities to match those of any big metropolis – and they're open to locals and visitors alike

For everyone

The city's libraries, sports centres and other facilities are open to all, regardless of how much they have or where they live

IN MADRID WE can't complain about facilities. For starters, there's Madrid City Council's Municipal Public Libraries Network, which is made up of 32 neighbourhood libraries. Then there are also specialised libraries with valuable collections, the Bibliometro train-station libraries and other institutions such as the Spanish National Library (pictured). On top of that, the municipal sports centres offer top-class facilities, from sports courts to gyms, classes and more. You can get good-value monthly passes and they're open until past 8pm. And if all that weren't enough, the city is also home to a number of big swimming pools.

The Municipal Public Libraries Network is made up of 32 centres

INTERVIEW

'The library was open 24 hours at exam time'

Javier Escudero Sahuquillo moved from La Roda, Albacete province (Castilla-La Mancha), to study the degree he wanted. This 30-year-old radio presenter chose the Getafe campus of the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid for his university course.

Did you use any libraries during your time in Madrid?

Yes. As I was studying in Getafe, I almost always used the university library, but sometimes I went to the Biblioteca Pedro Salinas in Puerta de Toledo, because it was open 24 hours during exam times.

What do you think of the range of public libraries?

There are a lot to choose from and almost all have a metro station nearby. And although there are periods when they fill up, you can usually find both the book you're looking for and a good spot.

Did you use the city sports facilities?

I joined the university gym for a few months. And I also sometimes went with my friends to the swimming pool in Puerta de Hierro, which quite impressed me because I had never seen such a big pool.

What did you think about the prices?

As I was part of the university network, I got good discounts, but generally things weren't very expensive.

Transport

Getting around Madrid is easy. The city has a large public transport network that includes the metro, buses, regional trains and e-bikes, along with a great taxi service

ONCE YOU KNOW how to get to the centre from the airport, moving round the city is easy. The best connections with Adolfo Suárez Madrid-Barajas Airport are: metro line 8 (Nuevos Ministerios-Aeropuerto T4); the C-1 Cercanías regional train, which takes you to Atocha or Príncipe Pío; and buses such as Bus Exprés, which runs 24 hours. But, beyond that, how else can you get around?

BY METRO

The Metro de Madrid is the quickest way to get around the city. Madrid has 12 metro lines and 238 stations, along with three light metro routes that operate like trams. Trains run from 6am to 2am (although the last one departs the first station of each line at 1.30am) and their frequency varies according to the time of day – anything between every three and every 15 minutes. A single ticket costs between €1.50 and €2 depending on the number of stations you pass through, while a ten-trip pass costs €12.20 and the airport supplement is €3. There are also monthly season tickets available by zone, as well as tourist passes. Download the network's mobile app to stay up to date about times, delays, routes and so on.

BY BUS

Madrid has a fleet of over 2,000 buses that serve more than 10,000 stops on 200 different routes, including the regular, university and night services, and an express line to the airport. The first bus on each route normally leaves at around 6.30am (7am at weekend) and the last one sets

Night buses are known as búhos ('owls')

off around 11.45pm. A single ticket costs €1.50. To visit towns near the capital, you can catch one of the intercity buses. Night buses are known as búhos ('owls') and follow different routes from the regular buses, leaving from Plaza de Cibeles. Frequency varies depending on whether it's a weekday or holiday. The EMT app is useful for checking times. There's also the Madrid City Tour Bus, a double-decker tourist bus

TICKETS

We explain three of the city's most popular travel passes

↑ Tarjeta Multi

You can buy this card from metro ticket machines and some tobacconists (estancos). It can be topped up to cover whatever journey you need, from a single trip to a ten-ticket pass. Not linked to any particular user, it's valid for ten years, is contactless and replaces the old 'metrobús' card and single tickets. You can also add up to three types of ticket on to it.

↑ Tarjeta Transporte Público Personal

This multi-journey ticket is linked to your name and is valid for 30 days from the day of purchase (not necessarily a particular calendar month). The Joven pass gives you free access to the Prado, Thyssen and Reina Sofía

↑ Abono turístico

This tourist card gives you unlimited travel on all Madrid regional public transport during the period of validity (one, two, three, five or seven days) and for two zones (A and T). You can buy it at the airport and at metro stations.

that covers the city's main points of interest and major streets. You can buy tickets for one or two days, and you can hop on and off it as much as you like along the route.

BY TRAIN

Cercanías de Renfe regional trains link the centre of Madrid with the outlying towns and are also a good alternative way of getting around the capital. Nuevos Ministerios, Atocha, Chamartín, Sol, Méndez Álvaro and Príncipe Pío are the main hubs. Trains on the network's ten lines run from 5am to midnight, though this varies according to the station. The same goes for their frequency, which is between every five and every 30 minutes. Fares depend on the number of zones you cross: a ticket for zones 1 and 2 costs €1.65, while one from zone 1 to 7 is €5.40. Tickets must be used within two hours of purchase.

BY TAXI

You can pick up a taxi 24 hours a day from one of the ranks located throughout the city, by hailing one in the street or via mobile apps such as Free Now. Minimum fares have been simplified and now there are just two: from Monday to Friday during the day (6am to 9pm) the minimum is €2.40 and at night, weekends and on holidays it's €2.90. There's also a flat rate of €30 for any journey between the airport and the city centre within the M-30 ring road. The price per kilometre depends on the zone and the time, but it usually ranges between €1.05 and €1.25.

BY BIKE

The BiciMAD e-bike rental service is becoming an increasingly popular way of getting around. A sustainable and fun mode of transport, it comprises over 2,028 bikes at more than 165 stations throughout Madrid. Buy an annual pass or a one-, three- or five-day card and you can take a bike from any station and leave it at another station within two hours for 0.50€ to 1€ for 30 minutes.

You can also rent your bike from various agencies around Madrid, including Mobeo in Matadero and the bike rental point in Parque

Juan Carlos I. A good cycling route to follow is the 'Anillo Verde', a 64km lane around Madrid city centre.

BY UBER AND CABIFY

Online services Uber and Cabify are transforming the way we get around, allowing their users to book private cars driven by licensed owners. You can visit the respective websites and download the apps on to your smartphone to get started booking journeys and checking prices.

BY CAR-SHARING

In recent years services such as Car To Go, Emov and Zity that rent e-cars by the minute have appeared in Madrid. As well as being environmentally friendly, their vehicles have the advantage that they can be left on the street without having to pay parking fees. There are also e-motorbike services available such as eCooltra and Muving. You'll find all the information you need on their respective apps.

Safety advice

Watch your belongings

Although Madrid is a very safe city, it's sensible to keep an eye on your belongings when you're on public transport or out in the street, especially at night. Look after your personal possessions and don't let them out of your sight in the metro, in bars and on terraces. That said, there's no need to panic: there are more than 8,400 cameras watching over your safety across the metro network, plus security guards in every station.

Don't carry too much cash

These days you can pay by card in almost any Madrid bar, restaurant or shop. So only carry the cash you need for small transactions.

Make copies of your personal documents

It's always worth being prepared, so make sure you have photocopies of your most important personal documents, such as your passport or ID card, and carry them around with you instead of the originals. That way, if you're unlucky enough to get robbed or lose them, everything will be much easier to sort out.

Plan your route

If you're not sure where you're going, it's best to ask. There's always bound to be someone willing to provide directions so you don't have to spend half an hour studying the metro map in a station or peering at Google Maps on your phone.

Always charge your mobile

Before leaving home, make sure your mobile has enough battery power so you can use it in case of emergency. You can also take your charger with you and connect it to the charge points you'll find in some metro carriages (mainly on line 6) and EMT buses.

Foreign Tourist Assistance Service

If you need police assistance, head to the station located near Plaza de España at Calle Leganitos, 19, which has a specialised service for helping foreigners.

If you have a problem, call Emergencias Madrid

In case of emergency, call 112, the number to help you with any situation involving danger, risk or threat to your person.

Getting around by metro

It's one of the fastest, most comfortable and economical ways of getting around the city. That's why it's essential to have a good, up-to-date metro map like this to hand to stop yourself getting lost

Good practice

Madrid's going to be your home for a while and we're very happy to welcome you. But if you want to enjoy the city as much as us, we recommend you follow a few basic guidelines

IN MADRID EVERYONE always gets a warm welcome and our aim is that you feel just like any other Madrileño, forming part of the daily life of our neighbourhoods. Strolling round Madrid doesn't just allow you to discover buildings and monuments and parks and gardens, but also to get a deep feel for our customs. For that reason, we hope you'll be happy to respect a few basic rules of coexistence, tolerance and respect during your stay. Looking after what's immediately around us is the best way of making sure our city continues to be an example of friendly togetherness. Enjoy it!

1 Keep it clean
Use the litter bins distributed around the city to be able to enjoy clean and attractive streets.

2 Don't smoke
But if you do, don't throw your cigarette butts on the floor! All the bins in the city are fitted with ashtrays. For the health of all, you're not allowed to smoke inside any public space.

3 Respect and recycle
Benches, street lamps, litter bins, bus shelters... it's everybody's responsibility to help keep the city's street furniture in good condition. At the same time, Madrid has containers for every type of waste, so make sure you recycle!

In summer you can always cool off in the fountains of the Madrid Río beach

4 Use public toilets
Spacious, accessible and clean, the city's public conveniences have recently been refurbished to meet your needs.

5 Don't jump into the fountains
In summer you can always cool off in the water jets on the Madrid Río beach. There are also many public and private swimming pools for taking a dip.

6 Don't drink on the street
The streets are not the place to consume alcohol. The city has plenty of amazing terraces where you can enjoy a few drinks in the open air.

7 Keep the noise down

Although you might have a lot to celebrate, noise annoys your neighbours. Be respectful! Follow the rules of civility where you live.

8 Use public transport

Tourist passes are available that make getting around easier, so use public transport. Almost all the buses run by the city's EMT service are low emissions.

9 Take a bike

You'll find stations for the city's BiciMAD bike rental service across Madrid.

10 Watch your belongings

Madrid is a safe city, but be careful with your personal possessions – above all in the most crowded areas. If you do run into any trouble, the local police are there to help you.

11 Stay in legal accommodation

This is vital for preserving the properties in which Madrileños live and ensuring the city doesn't lose its essence.

12 Don't waste water

Madrid has some of the best tap water in the world, but don't waste it. It's a scarce resource and looking after it will help improve the environment.

13 Buy local

Madrid's gastronomy and produce are top-quality. Contribute to balanced and sustainable development by consuming local products.

14 Discover the city's creators

Madrid is a creative and innovative city. It's a place where great artists, artisans, musicians and writers have lived and continue to live. Discover them and you will find new sensibilities and perspectives that will enrich your life.

Get to know all of Madrid's barrios – don't just stay in the centre!

15 Get to know the neighbourhoods

Madrid is a big city that has taken shape over several centuries. Don't just stay in the centre! We invite you to get to know it, from the most central and traditional places to other neighbourhoods that hide genuine artistic treasures, local festivities and incredible activities. Tetuán, Carabanchel, Usera, Hortaleza... grab a map and use it to get to know them all.

16 Be tolerant

We Madrileños like to live in a diverse and tolerant society. People of different races, sexual orientations, lifestyles and religious beliefs all live together in the city. Respect them. And remember: being tolerant of others is the best form of good manners.

The city is home to two of the biggest football clubs in Europe

From Cibeles to Neptuno

The city is home to both Real Madrid and Atlético de Madrid, two of the biggest football clubs in Europe

WITH THE HEIGHTS it's reached, no one can doubt Madrid's footballing prowess. The city is home to two of Europe's biggest football clubs, Real Madrid and Atlético de Madrid – eternal rivals that compete against each other both inside Spain in La Liga and outside Spain in the Champions League. Their recent clashes in the final of Europe's top club competition, in Lisbon in 2014 and in Milan in 2016, were unforgettable. Here we take a look back over both clubs' histories, where they celebrate their victories, and how to best visit their stadiums.

Real Madrid

The club with the most Uefa Champions League wins in history (13, plus 33 Spanish league titles, four Club World Cups and 19 domestic cups, among other trophies) needs little introduction. Real's fans number in their hundreds of thousands around the world, they celebrate their victories at the Cibeles fountain in the middle of Paseo del Prado, and they have the city's most centrally situated ground.

A world footballing landmark, the Santiago Bernabéu stadium (Av. de Concha Espina, 1. M: Santiago Bernabéu) is about to be remodelled to include a retractable roof and a restaurant overseen by ten-Michelin-starred chef Martín Berasategui. Opened in 1947, it seats 81,044 fans and the best way to get to know it is to book the Bernabéu Tour, which gives you the chance to see its trophies and dressing rooms up close and even sit in the dugout. Small wonder it's one of Madrid's most-visited tourist sites.

Since its founding in 1902, some of the most brilliant names in the history of the game have played for the club, from Alfredo Di Stéfano, David Beckham, Zinedine Zidane and Cristiano Ronaldo to home-grown heroes such as Iker Casillas and Sergio Ramos.

Atlético de Madrid

Better than any club, Atlético represent the capacity to improve. They're now experiencing the most successful period in their history 'one game at a time' – the motto that's defined them since the arrival of manager Diego 'Cholo' Simeone.

Since the 2017-2018 season, their home has been the Wanda Metropolitano stadium (Av. de

Since the 2017-2018 season, their home has been the Wanda Metropolitano stadium

Luis Aragones, 4. M: Estadio Metropolitano), which can seat 67,703 fans and was the first in the world to be lit entirely by LED technology, among other technological advances.

As at the Bernabéu, the best way to discover the secrets of this brand-new stadium is on the Wanda Metropolitano Tour, which takes in the player interview area, the trophy, press and dressing rooms, and more.

Atleti's trophy cabinet may not be quite as full as Real's, but they've still achieved some major triumphs since their founding in 1903: ten league titles, ten Spanish cups, three Europa League wins and three Europe Supercups. Their women's team, meanwhile, has won four league titles and one Spanish cup.

MADRID'S OTHER CLUBS

Estadio de Vallecas

Coliseum Alfonso Pérez

Butarque

1 Rayo Vallecano

Puente de Vallecas is the home of this football club, which enjoys a strong following in its neighbourhood. Founded in 1924, they've spent recent seasons moving back and forth between the first and second divisions. Their women's team is also very well known and has won three league titles.

→ Payaso Fofó, s/n. M: Buenos Aires.

2 Getafe CF

The outlying town of Getafe has had a team in the top flight of Spanish football since 2004. Their ground is named in honour of Alfonso Pérez, who despite never playing for the club remains the most famous player born in the area.

→ Av. Teresa de Calcuta, s/n. M: Los Espartaes.

3 Club Deportivo Leganés

Leganés are the most recent Madrid arrivals in the First Division. Having won promotion in 2016, they've successfully remain there every season since. The club was founded in 1928 and its fans are known as 'pepineros' owing to the fact that the ground was situated next to an area of cucumber (pepino) fields.

→ Arquitectura, s/n. M: Julián Besteiro.

Shopping getaway

Just 30 minutes from the centre of Madrid, Las Rozas Village is a paradise for lovers of designer stores

WHO DOESN'T LIKE a trip out to a charming village? And if that village also happens to be a fashion paradise, you're in for an even more glamorous and stylish getaway. Set against the backdrop of the nearby Madrid sierra, Las Rozas Village is designed to look like a traditional mountain town, with wide streets lined with trees, light-coloured terracotta walls and elegant buildings. Inside, it's home to more than 100 boutiques, open from 10am to 9pm every day except Saturdays – when they're open till 10pm. Highlights include stores devoted to Spanish designers such as Bimba y Lola and El Ganso, and big international labels like CK Jeans, Hackett, Levi's, Maje, Sandro and Vans, not to mention beauty spaces such as Clarins' open-spa. And there's no shortage of top-line accessories, either, including bags by Coach and Michael Kors, and TOUS jewellery, among others. But the most surprising thing is that throughout the whole year the stores offer discounts of up to 60 percent off the original price. This is designer shopping that anyone can enjoy! You don't have to worry

DON'T MISS

Great taste

If you fancy a quick bite, brunch or a good sit-down lunch in between stores, you'll find a great selection of cafés, food trucks and restaurants at Las Rozas Village, including the gourmet food stand recently opened by chef Cristina Oria. WE TALK TO...

María Folguera

The director of the Teatro Circo Price has fostered an innovative idea of performance that aims to challenge audience prejudices

THE WORD 'CIRCUS' is synonymous with innovation and risk. So says María Folguera, director of the Teatro Circo Price, a unique performance space that has hosted some of the greatest circus troupes in the world. On the programme, she's bet on new formats and the surprise effect, and her work to lure in new audiences continues to bear fruit.

What challenges did you face when you started as director at the Price?

The first challenge is always to promote an idea of the circus that gets away from the stereotype. The very word has strong connotations, linked to an imaginary classical concept that belongs to a bygone age. We want to define the circus just like any other diverse performance art, with different trends, formats and theatrics.

“The challenge is to promote an idea of the circus that gets away from the stereotype”

What kind of circus are we talking about?

The circus is everything that reflects on risk. It is a very direct and accessible language that is spoken with the body, experimenting with all its possibilities. It is very important to us to be fun and entertaining and that every time someone comes to the Price, they enjoy a special experience in a spectacular circular space unique both in the city and in Spain. We have links to important international centres such as Tohu in Montreal and La Grainerie in Toulouse.

Who goes to the circus nowadays?

Thanks to the JOBO cultural pass we've welcomed an audience that connects with the circus in a special way. They're young people, who have immediate reactions, no historical prejudices, and are fascinated by what we put on. And, of course, we also have our devoted regulars who never miss our Christmas show. ■

The best musicals

1 The Lion King

The Lion King is one of the most universal shows around and more than 80 million people have already seen it worldwide. Its surprising staging, moving figures and evocative and well-known music have made it one of Madrid's best productions, transporting audiences to the African savannah. A host of world-renowned names in music (Elton John, Tim Rice, Lebo M, Hans Zimmer) and acting (Julie Taymor) have come together to create a spectacle that fuses sophisticated disciplines from African, Asian and Western dramatic arts. A must for all musical lovers.

→ Teatro Lope de Vega. Gran Vía, 57. M: Callao.

2 Billy Elliot

Following 11 years of success in London's West End and six on Broadway, Billy Elliot is now taking Madrid by storm. Seen by over 10 million people to date, the story tells the struggle of an 11-year-old boy to become a professional dancer. The soundtrack was composed by Elton John and the original choreography is by Peter Darling.

→ Nuevo Teatro Alcalá. Jorge Juan, 62. M: Príncipe de Vergara.

3 La llamada

"La llamada is like a first love, which never dies", say Javi Ambrossi and Javi Calvo, best known as Los Javis. This young Madrid theatre duo, popular thanks to Netflix series Paquita Salas, made their name with this musical, which opened in 2013. Irreverent and disruptive, it's set in a Catholic summer camp where two girls fall in love: one with God, the other with a nun. The cast may change every season, but the staging's carefree spirit hasn't lost an ounce of its original flair.

→ Teatro Lara. Corredera Baja de San Pablo, 15. M: Callao.

4 Anastasia

Anastasia was the youngest daughter of the Romanovs who, according to Russian legend, escaped the Bolshevik revolution and travelled from St Petersburg to Paris to find her true identity, after years of not knowing who she really was. This passionate adventure looks poised to become the musical of the year. Madrid is the first European city to premiere this mega production, which triumphed on Broadway, where it received great reviews and hung up 'sold out' signs every night. Tony Award-winner Darko Tresnjak's direction and a book by four-time Tony winner Terrence McNally means its success is more than guaranteed.

→ Teatro Coliseum. Gran Vía, 78. M: Plaza de España.

5 La jaula de las locas

After triumphing in Barcelona, this hilarious musical comedy, chock-full of feathers, sequins and vaudevillian camp, has landed in Madrid flaunting all the ingredients to become a hit. Directed by Àngel Llàcer and Manu Guix, the Spanish version of Jerry Herman and Harvey Fierstein's Broadway musical La Cage aux Folles is a flamboyant work with lively choreography.

→ Teatro Rialto. Gran Vía, 54. M: Santo Domingo.

MUST-VISIT THEATRES IN MADRID

Music festivals for all

Madrid is one of the Spanish cities with the most music events, home to fests covering a wide range of different genres and prices. Mad Cool, Mulafest, Brunch -In the Park and Dcode are among those you won't want to miss

DCODE

Dcode is still going strong as one of the city's biggest festivals organised by and for students. It started in 2011 and since then each September many top names in indie, rock, dance and other genres have graced its stage – located in a leafy area of the Complutense University's Faculty of Information Sciences – including The Killers, Suede, Foals, Crystal Fighters and Jake Bugg.
→ www.dcodefest.com

MULAFEST

Over the last three days of April, concerts, tattoos, urban sports, street food and much more invade Madrid's Ifema convention centre for Mulafest. An unmissable date in the city's festival calendar if you're into any form of urban culture, it even has its own island, complete with sandy beach.

→ www.mulafest.com

MAD COOL

This was the macro-festival that Madrid needed and it's held mid-July in the Mad Cool-Valdebebas space. Previous editions have drawn 80,000 people a day to watch the likes

The city's main open-air festivals are held from May to October of Pearl Jam, Depeche Mode, Jack White, Tame Impala and Kasabian perform.

BRUNCH -IN THE PARK

Every year Brunch -In the Park

JAVIER ROSA

Pearl Jam and Tame Impala have performed on Mad Cool's stages

features a special combination of music, food trucks and children's activities that provides a crossover between fun and culture that's aimed not just at adults, but at kids, too. The perfect place to dance away a Sunday in September or October to the rhythm of the best electronic music around, it features DJs from across Spain and beyond, all in the Enrique Tierno Galván park.

RICARDO RONCERO

1 Hinds
Comprising four young Madrileñas aged between 22 and 27, this indie rock band (with a few garage pop, surf and lo-fi touches) released their first album in 2016. They've since played festivals on four continents, appeared in magazines such as Rolling Stone and NME, and become the first Spanish group to perform on US late-night TV. Top tracks such as Garden and Bamboo now rack up more than four million plays on Spotify and all their gigs are total carnage. They've found big-time success, and we urge you not to let them out of your sight.

2 Los Punsetes
It seems like only yesterday, but it's 12 years since Los Punsetes burst on to the Spanish music scene like a tornado. Unclassifiable and transgressive, they're halfway between pop and punk, with most recent record, ¡Viva!, greeted as a cause for celebration. Influenced by '80s acts such as Kaka de Luxe and '90s indie-pop bands like Los Planetas, but with a more modern image and some very bizarre lyrics, Los Punsetes are one of Madrid's best alternative bands and no self-respecting modern music lover would disagree.

3 Vetusta Morla
It's 20 years since these then kids from Tres Cantos in the north of the city first met to play together. Today no one can deny that Vetusta Morla are one of Spain's leading indie bands. They've released several hugely successful albums and sell out wherever they play, even 38,000-capacity venues. Their tour in support of latest album, Mismo sitio, distinto lugar, spread a lot of magic, with beautiful songs such as 23 de junio and Deséame suerte. The name, by the way, comes from the giant tortoise in The Neverending Story.

Local bands

We introduce you to the five most successful bands in Madrid right now. Some of their tracks have already become timeless anthems

MARIANO REGIDOR

NEVA LHOISHINA

4 Carolina Durante
This four-piece took to the stage in 2017 and although complete newcomers, word of mouth transformed them into an immediate phenomenon. Most people discovered them through their most popular hit, Cayetano, though they were already showing promise when they launched first EP Necromántico. Insultingly young, Carolina Durante have an energy that explodes at every live show. The tracks they've released to date drip with irony, just like those of Los Punsetes y Los Nikis, to whom they're endlessly compared. They're here to stay.

5 Cariño
Two of them were neighbours in the same apartment block who got to know each other through Tinder. The other they saw play one night in Malasaña and after the concert chased her down Calle Pez with a demo and headphones. Since starting in the summer of 2018, Cariño have set the scene alight, paying tribute to the colourful so-called tontipop of '90s bands such as Meteosat and gifting us catchy generational anthems such as Canción de pop de amor and Mierda seca. As their name ('affection') suggests, they're a warm and cheerful live act.

It also organises film seasons and exhibitions related to music.

→ San Dimas, 3. M: Tribunal.

Café Central

The city's official temple to jazz offers a carefully curated programme of concerts taking place every night of the week.

→ Ángel, 10. M: Antón Martín.

WiZink Center

With capacity for up to 15,000 people, this is Madrid's largest concert venue, offering the biggest programme. Its name changes with the sponsor but Madrileños will always know it as the Palacio de Deportes.

→ Av. Felipe II, s/n. M: Goya.

Music

HOUSE Kapital

A huge club covering several floors with different styles of music, from Latin to house to techno. Its VIP areas famously host some of the best parties in Madrid.

→ Atocha, 125.
M: Atocha.

MAINSTREAM Mitty

A student-friendly club hosting a mix of mainstream music and concerts that's perfect for dancing the night away. There are decent-priced drinks, too.

→ Julián Romea, 4.
M: Guzmán el Bueno.

INDIE POP Ochoymedio

An indie pop favourite among young Madrileños. As well as pop concerts by both home-grown and international artists, it's also famous for its DJ sessions and Jägermeister shot parties.

→ Sala But. Barceló, 11.
M: Tribunal.

TECHNO Cassette

Cassette is Madrid's Sunday techno club, perfect for people who don't work Mondays or for party animals who head here to cap off their weekends.

→ Sala Boite. Tetuán, 27.
M: Sol, Gran Vía.

TRAP Cha Chá The Club

You'll feel like you're at a trendy private club at this weekly night where they play trap, rap, electronica and reggaeton, and stars such as Young Beef and Miss Nina perform and DJ. Its Instagram rocks, too.

→ Cedaceros, 7.

M: Sevilla.

MINIMALTECHNO Ballesta Club

Opened recently in the heart of Malasaña, this modern club has quickly become a

Beyond Chueca

Madrid's LGBTBI scene has moved out from its traditional Chueca home, with La Latina, Malasaña and Lavapiés now also featuring great venues for the community

1 La 80

Walk through the doors of this spot in Lavapiés and you're transported back to the '80s, not just because of the mix of home-grown and international pop played by its DJs, but also because of its décor, which features mirror balls and brightly painted walls in pink and blue. This disco-bar is a really fun place and particularly popular with young thirtysomething lesbians. Open from Wednesday to Sunday until after 3am, it's nearly always busy.
→ Sombrerería, 8. M: Chueca.

2 El Rincón Guay

The terrace of this major LGBTBI-friendly Lavapiés venue is packed every evening with people enjoying a drink and its soundtrack of queer-pop classics. A hot spot for alternative new generation who've swapped Chueca for the authenticity and multiculturalism of Lavapiés, it has a great atmosphere, good vibe, beautiful and likeable people, and lots of flirting.
→ Embajadores, 62. M: Lavapiés.

3 Thick Bar

A fun, fresh, alternative bar that pushes all the usual LGBTBI labels to one side. Open to everyone, it's a place where having a good time, rather than posing, is the most important thing, hosting fun nights of the kind that took place years ago in legendary Chueca venues such as Refugio and Pasapoga. The music is commercial and uninhibited and even makes the staff dance, and there are occasional wild parties on Thursday and Sunday evenings that feature some of Madrid's best DJs. The bar to be in Chueca, which remains the city's LGBTBI neighbourhood par excellence.

→ San Marcos, 16. M: Chueca.

4 El Atril

On Sunday evenings La Latina turns into a 'mini Chueca', with its own circuit of LGBTBI bars and pubs. One of the key places in the area (along with the likes of La Sixta and El Perla) is this fun bar, which embraces the party spirit of the traditional La Paloma festivities, with an emphasis on fun, freedom, letting go and having a good time.
→ La Paloma, 9. M: La Latina.

THE BEST
PARTIES
FOR A GREAT TIME

DRLO Live

Stage venue DLRO Live is the place to see shows, live performances, cabaret, stand-up comedy and photography and art exhibitions in a queer atmosphere. Madrid's best drag queens are regulars and the venue is a popular haunt for twinks (young, boyish gays). Lots of fun.
→ Pelayo, 59. M: Chueca.

Churros con chocolate

Held one Sunday a month, this is one of the best themed parties on the Madrid gay scene, with gifts, snacks, churros, pop music, shows and two rooms bursting with fun. Each edition has a different theme, and guests are invited to join in any way they like. Free entry until 11pm.

→ Sala Cool. Isabel La Católica, 6. M: Santo Domingo.

Ultrapop

With its gold and fluorescent décor, Ultrapop takes its aesthetic cues from the likes of Keith

We Party

We Party guarantees a good time, taking Madrid's gay nightlife by storm with its mix of stage shows, international house DJs and good-looking guys.

→ La Riviera. www.wepartyontour.com/es/

Haring, Jeff Koons and Michael Alig. It's the creation of fantastic transvestite artist La Prohibida, one of the biggest electropop singers on the Spanish scene.

→ Sala Boite. Tetuán, 27. M: Sol.

Kluster

One of Saturday night's essential club sessions, Kluster features the biggest international DJs on the gay circuit and a dance floor packed with muscly shirtless men.

→ Sala Changó. Covarrubias, 42. M: Alonso Martínez.

Fulanita de Tal

Running for almost a decade, this Chueca venue is now a Madrid nightlife landmark. With a mostly lesbian clientele, it organises fun club nights, as well as concerts and even sporting contests.

→ Regueros, 9. M: Chueca.

Odarko

This fetish night has a strict dress code of leather, rubber, straps and lycra, and a very masculine vibe. On the decks, DJ Carranco plays progressive techno-house that's straight out of Berlin's hardcore clubs.

→ Sala Strong. Trujillos, 7. M: Callao.

Club 33

The old Medea nightclub may have changed its name but its style has stayed the same. A meeting spot for party-hard lesbians each weekend, it has a relaxed and flirty atmosphere.

→ Cabeza, 33. M: Lavapiés.

My Pleasure

This night defines itself as a monthly gay 'electro erotica' party celebrating all things fetish. The DJs play mostly deep house and electro and there are often special sessions, too.

→ Sala Pirandello. Martín de los Heros, 14. M: Plaza de España.

TANGA! Party

Set up in Barcelona in 2015, this party has taken no time to establish itself in Madrid. The idea is to offer 'a pop and fun alternative where the entire LGTBI public has a place,' says co-creator David Marcos. Enjoy top pop tracks from the past and present one Sunday every month.

→ Teatro Barceló. M: Tribunal.

Factoría Cariño

When the shutters came down on club Marta, Cariño!, the action moved to Sala Cool, where lovers of Spanish and international pop now have their weekly date in the form of Baila, Cariño!. The good times and great dancing that go on there have helped make it one of the most popular sessions in the city.

→ Marta, Cariño!

Santa Engracia, 17. M: Alonso Martínez.

Cultural overload threatens at every turn in Madrid, but these are the museum artworks you shouldn't leave without taking in

A CITY FULL OF ART

As well as the key works of art listed here, Madrid's museums and galleries are home to major collections that are undergoing constant renewal and attract thousands of tourists every year.

→ www.timeout.com/madrid/arts-theatre

1 Las Meninas
A work of art if ever there was one, Velázquez's canvas heralds the birth of modern painting with a composition that was way ahead of its time. Depicting a scene from everyday life, it has generated multiple interpretations, both of its political meanings and artistic and historical aspects.
→ Museo del Prado

crowning achievement of a great master.
→ Museo del Prado

4 The Three Graces
One of the most representative baroque works, this was painted by Rubens, one of its best exponents. The voluptuous figures of the three women demonstrate the beauty ideals of the period.
→ Museo del Prado

2 The Garden of Earthly Delights
This triptych is one of Bosch's most enigmatic pieces. Considered one of the most fascinating paintings in art history, it depicts Paradise, Creation and Hell.
→ Museo del Prado

5 Guernica
Picasso created this hard-hitting and symbolist work to represent the suffering caused by the bombing of the Bizkaia town of the title during the Spanish Civil War. A symbol of the horrors of war, it was shown at the 1937 International Exhibition in Paris to raise awareness of the Republican cause.
→ Museo Reina Sofía

3 The Nobleman with his Hand on his Chest
One of the most famous portraits by Doménikos Theotokópoulos, aka El Greco, it shows a sixteenth-century nobleman (perhaps the third marquis of Montemayor) with his hand on his chest and looking at the viewer as though making a deal with them. A

6 Les Vessensots in Auvers
A spectacular piece by Vincent van Gogh, with luminous greens and yellows, and nervous, unsettled brushstrokes that follow a wavy, repetitive rhythm as they depict this town north of Paris.

→ Museo Thyssen-Bornemisza

7 The Third of May 1808
This painting by Goya shows the violent repression carried out by the occupying French army after Madrileños rose up against it on May 2 1808. Another of the Prado's key pieces, it's one of the Aragonese painter's most famous works in his 'Disasters of War' series.
→ Museo del Prado

8 Woman in Bath
A masterpiece by pop artist Roy Lichtenstein, painted using a rudimentary red, blue and yellow primary colour scheme applied in his characteristic Ben-Day dots. The result looks like a comic book turned into a work of art.
→ Museo Thyssen-Bornemisza

9 The Great Masturbator
A symbol of his sexual obsessions, Salvador Dalí's autobiographical dreamscape was painted at the end of the summer of 1929 after he'd spent several days with his future wife, Gala.
→ Museo Reina Sofía

10 Hotel Room
The loneliness of modern cities is one of the central themes of Edward Hopper's work, and in this painting the engrossed female figure on the bed contrasts with the coldness of the room, in which clear lines and brilliant plain colours predominate.
→ Museo Thyssen-Bornemisza

Literary corners

CUESTA DE MOYANO

On the edge of the Retiro park, this is one of the city's nerve centres for lovers of secondhand books. The famous Moyano hill is part of Madrid's Paseo del Arte and it features original programming of weekend cultural events. Organised by Territorio Moyano, the project aims to promote and encourage reading in the area. The stalls have been there for years and make up the city's only permanent book market.

→ www.cuestamoyano.es

FERIA DEL LIBRO

The most important date in the city's literary calendar takes place each year in the Retiro park from the end of May to the beginning of June. The Madrid Book Fair is a unique opportunity to discover the latest publications, attend book signings, and meet authors in person. It features over 300 stalls covering different themes, as well as children's activities, workshops and plenty more.

→ www.ferialibromadrid.com

LIBROS MUTANTES

La Casa Encendida cultural centre hosts this fair for independent publishers every April, with fanzines, design, free workshops, children's activities and music.

→ www.librosmutantes.com

OTHERS FAIRS AND FESTIVALS

If you're still hankering for more literature, make a note of these two events: the Feria del Libro Antiguo y de Ocasión in Paseo de Recoletos (April-May and September-October), and La Noche de los Libros, held in various bookshops at the end of April.

TOP 3

Original bookshops

Tipos Infames

→ Joaquín, 3. M: Tribunal.

This bookshop specialises in independent authors and publishers, and also has a corner given over to a café/wine bar. It's a dynamic and open cultural space that, as well as promoting independent literature, offers other quality products such as wine and craft beer, not to mention a wide range of activities including book presentations, tastings, exhibitions, workshops and courses. A highly recommended alternative space in the heart of Malasaña.

La Casquería

→ Embajadores, 41. M: Lavapiés.

Since 2012 the old María Luisa offal and Manoli poultry stalls in the Mercado de San Fernando have been the home of this stand where you can buy books by weight. The price is 10€ a kilo and its aim is to promote free and sustainable culture and local trade.

Tuulibrería

→ Covarrubias, 38. M: Bilbao.

This is the only bookstore (it has three branches) where you can choose the price of every book you buy. Its philosophy is that everyone should have access to literature, regardless of their economic resources. It also donates books to charity and sends them to developing countries, as well as organising activities and events.

Shopping in the city

If you like getting out and about in the heart of Madrid, finding everything for every taste in one place, and turning a day's shopping into an ideal experience, you'll love La Vaguada

SOME PLACES SURPRISE you with their architecture, their décor or what they offer... But others do so precisely because they bring everything together in one place. That's the case with the La Vaguada shopping centre, right in the heart of Madrid. Inside this city landmark, you'll find some of the most surprising experiences around.

A perfect experience

The city's first shopping mall, La Vaguada transformed the concept of 'going shopping' into an all-encompassing experience when it opened its doors in 1983. Since then, that idea has done nothing but evolve, with the centre expanding its range of possibilities to make you feel at home. Starting your day with a good brunch, stocking up on groceries at its traditional market and enjoying its restaurants' terraces are just some of the things you can do here to turn an ordinary day into a special one.

Unique moments

Sports, home, beauty, music, literature... it doesn't matter what your passion is! At La Vaguada everything is possible since it's home to over 300 stores and services where you can find almost anything. There, awaiting you are the latest fashion trends and accessories from the best brands, alongside myriad entertainment options. Movie lovers will enjoy the best new releases in its cinema, the selection of restaurants will keep the most ardent foodie's culinary curiosity satisfied, while even video-gamers get their spot in the form of the La Arena e-sports space.

Whatever you're looking for, you'll find it in one of La Vaguada's 300 stores

But that's not all, because throughout the whole year La Vaguada hosts a varied line-up of cultural activities, including concerts and family shows, that turn it into a landmark meeting point for locals and visitors alike.

Come and discover it: your perfect day is waiting for you!

Famous Madrid dishes

The capital is known for its great food and there are many typical dishes that define its delicious culinary culture. These are our favourites and the best places to try them

EL COCIDO MADRILEÑO

Madrid's most typical dish is this stew made from chickpeas, broth and meat, although there are many variations on the basic recipe.

The best-known version is undoubtedly that served in La Bola in the old city centre – its secret is to cook each serving in individual clay pots on a bed of charred holm oak.

→ Taberna La Bola. Bola, 5. M: Ópera.

HUEVOS ESTRELLADOS

The best version of this egg dish is the world-famous one made at Casa Lucio. It roasts, rather than fries, its eggs in a pan with a little oil, cooking the yolk and white on both sides, before serving them on a delicious bed of fried potatoes. Simple presentation and classic flavours in a La Latina restaurant where tradition rules.

→ Casa Lucio. Cava Baja, 35. M: La Latina.

PATATAS BRAVAS

The patatas bravas served at Docamar are famous across Madrid. The potatoes are freshly cooked to perfection, and served with just the right amount of spicy bravas sauce. The bar keeps its winning recipe a closely guarded secret and once you've tried them you're sure to be back for more. It also sells its tasty bravas sauce for you to take home.

→ Docamar. Alcalá, 337. M: Quintana.

BACALAO REBOZADO

You have to go to Casa Labra to try this dish. There cod (bacalao) is the speciality, particularly cod croquettes and tajadas – pieces of fish fried in batter. You can either try them right there on the premises or take them away – no bad option, given that the restaurant and terrace are almost always full and the wait to order can seem eternal.

→ Casa Labra. Tetuán, 12. M: Sol.

ROSQUILLAS

These typical Madrid doughnut-like pastries are traditionally made in May during the annual San Isidro festival celebrating the city's patron saint, but you can increasingly find them outside of that time. There are various types: rosquillas tontas are plain, while rosquillas listas are covered with icing and the Santa Clara ones are topped with meringue. Even Madrid's most creative bakers adhere strictly to tradition in making them.

→ La Duquesita. Fernando VI, 2. M: Alonso Martínez.

CROQUETAS

Some say it's the ones their mum makes, others say it's their granny's – Spaniards always have trouble agreeing who makes the best croquettes. So imagine the impossibility of doing it in a city where every bar

CALLOS

La Tasquita de Enfrente is famous for its version of this traditional offal stew. Chef Juanjo López uses both special black and salted varieties of tripe, washing each one in cold water before cooking them for almost six hours.

→ La Tasquita de Enfrente. Ballesta, 6. M: Callao.

and restaurant offers their own version. More runny, less runny; with Iberian ham or with shrimp and kimchi; coated in classic breadcrumbs or crunchier Japanese panko crumbs... The choices are endless, though we're rather partial to the ones at Santerra.

→ Santerra. General Pardiñas, 56. M: Lista.

CHOCOLATE CON CHURROS

You won't get your honorary Madrid members' card if you haven't tried chocolate and churros (deep-fried pastry fingers) at the Chocolatería San Ginés. This traditional city-centre café has tables downstairs, but you'll be lucky to get one at weekends. Its churros are the perfect size and thickness, crunchy and hot. A Madrid must-do.

TORRIJAS

La Casa de las Torrijas has been cooking these traditional Easter treats for years – its versions are so soft and juicy, they dissolve in your mouth. There are two different kinds, those made with milk and those made with wine, and it serves them both all year round. A classic Madrid dessert.

→ La Casa de las Torrijas. Paz, 4. M: Sol.

FOODIE TRADITION

The perfect squid baguette

You can find the classic Madrid bocata de calamares at:

EL BRILLANTE

This beer bar opposite Atocha station has been serving its famous squid baguettes since 1961.

→ Pza. Emperador Carlos V, 8.

TABLAFINA

In the hall of the NH hotel, next to cheeses, meats and tapas, you have a splendid version.

→ Paseo del Prado, 48.

PERRO BAR

This bar fries its squid in olive oil, then serves it in Galician bread with an olive sauce.

→ El Corte Inglés. Plaza del Callao, 2.

BAR POSTAS

Off Plaza Mayor, Postas is famous for its squid baguettes, as well as its marinated fish and baby squid tapas.

→ Postas, 13.

Tortilla de patata

The potato omelette is one of Spain's tastiest and best-known dishes. The question is, though, should it be with onion or without?

THE TORTILLA IS AN ESSENTIAL part of the national menu, and there are as many different ways of preparing it as there are people. Really, though, it has only three essential ingredients: eggs, potatoes and olive oil. Even so, put four friends together and no two will turn out an omelette that looks or tastes the same. With or without onion (and should it be caramelised)? Thin or four centimetres thick? Cooked through or slightly runny in the middle? Served sliced or on cocktail sticks...? Here we present some of the bars and restaurants with tortillas we'd swear by.

LA ARDOSA

A classic bar for a pre-lunch or early evening drink with a traditional feel and shelves lined with dusty bottles. It only serves beers in double cañas but they go down well with something from the appealing menu – and when you try the tortilla you'll understand why this place is so famous. Duck behind the bar and you'll find a small lounge at the back.
→ Colón, 13. M: Tribunal.

SYLKAR

No list of the best tortillas in Madrid would be complete without this family establishment. At first glance it might seem like a normal café-bar, but it hides not only a wonderful kitchen where everything is home-made using traditional recipes, but also a well-stocked wine cellar. Its torrijas – a kind of Spanish bread pudding, traditionally served at Easter – are also to die for.
→ Espronceda, 17. M: Ríos Rosas.

CASA DANI

Occupying a small spot in the centre of the Mercado de la Paz, this bar serves breakfasts from seven in the morning and

TABERNA PEDRAZA

This bar in the Retiro area puts a great twist on the traditional (onion-free) tortilla. It uses fresh free-range eggs that weigh between 56g and 60g and come from chickens fed on corn to make the yolk more yellow. The potatoes, meanwhile, are a hydroponically grown cross of the Kennebec and Agria varieties. The result is soft, yellow tortillas (the recipe comes from the renowned O'Pote restaurant in Betanzos in Galicia) that are beyond compare. One of the best in Madrid. → Ibiza, 38. M: Ibiza.

lunches from ten. Served with or without onion, in slices to eat at the bar or whole to take away, its tortillas, made with crispy potatoes and generous amounts of egg, are worthy examples of those you'll find in any traditional Madrid bar.
→ Ayala, 28. M: Serrano.

OCAFÚ

Formerly known as La Penela, this restaurant makes tortillas the way they make them in the Galician town of Betanzos, and they're considered some of the best in Madrid. There are also other delicious Galician treats to try, so you're sure to want to keep coming back.

→ Infanta Mercedes, 98. M: Valdeacederas.

JUANA LA LOCA PINTXOS BAR

This trendy tapas bar isn't cheap, but it offers some top-level creative cooking – its pinchos (little combos of ingredients skewered on to pieces of bread) include ostrich, plum and crunchy bacon, and foie gras with caramelised apple. Its tortilla is cooked through but still runny, though the main difference is its inclusion of caramelised onion. Delicious!
→ Puerta de Moros, 4. M: La Latina.

Madrid's best tapas bars

Enjoying a beer and a few bites to eat is what the Spanish call tapear. Indulge at one of these places and you won't be disappointed

ÍNDALO TAPAS

Cold beer, friendly service and above all, you can choose a free tapa with your drink, just like in Almería.

LA BLANCA PALOMA

Chilled beer in tall glasses with the added appeal of free tapas and cheap spirits.

→ Espíritu Santo, 21.

EL TIGRE

Always packed, it serves its beers with generous free tapas that change with each round

TAPAS & PINCHOS

Taberna Arzábal

Arzábal (pictured) offers traditional tapas bar cooking. With waiting staff rushing backwards and forwards and shelves full of wine bottles, this is about top-quality ingredients prepared with a minimum of fuss.

The croquettes are a must.

CEVICHE & TIRADITOS

Barra Eme

An urban bar where you can explore street food and culture from around the world – particularly Peru – with great dishes and cocktails.

Chef Omar Malpartida's menu features Asian, European and Latin American influences.

→ Libertad, 5. M: Chueca.

FRESH MARKET FOOD

Mercado de la Reina

This place serves tapas and larger raciones from morning until last thing at night, with interesting seasonal variations adding a touch of the unexpected.

One of the best bars on Gran Vía.

EXQUISITE PINCHOS

Taberna Laredo

Traditional Spanish food simply prepared using fresh market produce. You can enjoy all the dishes on offer each day either at the bar or in the dining room.

→ Dr. Castelo, 30. M: Ibiza.

ANDALUSIAN FRIED FISH

Bocaíto

This 50-year-old bar specialises in toasts with toppings, tapas and traditional dishes from the Castile and Andalucía regions, with fried fish and fresh seafood from the Cantabrian Sea.

→ Libertad, 6. M: Chueca.

HAUTE CUISINE TAPAS

La Raquetista

One of the many gastrobars around the Retiro, La Raquetista specialises in haute cuisine tapas such as razor shell ceviche, chickpeas with black sausage and foie gras, and its amazing Russian salad. One of the best bars in the area.

→ Dr. Castelo, 19. M: Ibiza.

IN A WINE GLASS

Taberna del Chato

Tapas here are served in chats – typical low wine tumblers – and include dishes ranging from salmorejo (a chilled tomato dip like gazpacho) to curried chicken, pickled partridge salad, tuna tartar with seaweed, and steak teriyaki. Each is a little mouthful of pleasure and, unsurprisingly, the place is always packed at weekends, so be sure to get there early!

→ Cruz, 35. M: Sol.

Federal Café

1 Federal Café

The substantial breakfasts here are an ideal way to inject some energy into your morning. The menu features everything from Greek yogurt with cereal, to toast with all kinds of toppings, freshly baked croissants and scrambled eggs. Its products are all fresh and organic, including the flour and eggs, and there are gluten-free options, too. The delicious cakes are baked by the resident pastry chef and come in eight different varieties, while the coffee is similarly of luxury breakfast standard. Also offering a great brunch, this is a place where you can feel right at home.

→ Plaza de las Comendadoras, 9. M: Plaza de España.

2 Pum Pum Café

An old butcher's dating back to 1800 has been converted into this vegetarian haven where you can munch on delicious treats while breathing in the smell of its freshly toasted and ground organic coffee, sourced from a small Madrid producer. The breakfast menu features carrot, raspberry and lemon sponge cakes and up to 12 different baked items, including brownies, cookies, lemon pie and alfajores de maicena (Argentinian sandwich biscuits).

→ Tribulete, 6. M: La Latina.

TOP 5

Cafés with charm

Good coffee, homemade pastries, attractive décor – our pick of perfect places to start your day with a tasty breakfast

Motteau

3 Motteau

Inject some Parisian glamour into your morning coffee at Motteau, an independent pastry shop where you can watch the chef preparing delicacies such as lemon tart, chocolate tart with stout and sponge cake with hazelnut cream. The place is famous for its croissants, cheesecake and tarte tatin, which are partly to blame for the wonderful smell of French butter that permeates the shop. Whatever you choose, though, enjoy it with a good cup of coffee and the lively atmosphere.

→ San Pedro, 9. M: Antón Martín.

Cereal Hunters Café

La Carmencita

4 Cereal Hunters Café

More than 150 different cereal boxes greet you at this paradise for lovers of Cheerios, Frosties, Coco Pops as well as harder-to-find international imports such as Star Wars, Batman and Flintstones. Syrups, toppings (dried fruit, chocolate cookies, fruit jellies and more) and 20 different kinds of milk (some of vegetable origin) complete the menu at this Malasaña café that, though small, still includes a bar and a few tables where you can enjoy your bowl of cereal in peace.

→ Mejía Lequerica, 14. M: Tribunal.

5 Taberna La Carmencita

Breakfast in one of Madrid's oldest taverns (it dates from 1854) has its charms. Today La Carmencita can be found serving organic bread made with stone-ground flour from Zamora, fresh butter from farms in the Sierra de Madrid, cheese from San Pedro del Romeral, honey from Patones, jam from Liébana, homemade yogurt, juice from Valencian oranges, organic milk from free-range cows in the Madrid mountains, and freshly toasted fair-trade coffee. Simply marvellous!

→ Libertad, 16. M: Chueca.

Drink

The craft beer crawl

LA TAPE

This gourmet space combines its range of craft beers (both bottled and from the barrel) with a range of dishes to suit all tastes designed to match them, including houmous, Russian salad, cheese and cured meat boards and croquettes. There's a sizeable selection of Spanish and international beers and it can even organise private tastings and parties, too.

→ San Bernardo, 88. M: San Bernardo.

BODEGA SALVAJE

Windmills and the hypnotising face of Spanish film star Sara Montiel about to sing Bésame mucho hang from the walls. Glass after glass of La Gorda and La Flaca, its two most accessible brews for newbies, flies out from the bar. Along with those two and a menu of around ten traditional dishes, you'll also find six taps on which it rotates the other beers it makes in the town of Alcázar de San Juan.

MAD BREWING

As well as allowing you to see the brewery where the beer is made and sample its main varieties, this place has a spacious New York-style taproom where you can pair the brews with some top-notch food.

→ Julián Camarillo, 19. M: Ciudad Lineal.

EL PEDAL

This small bar in Lavapiés crams in a good selection of craft beers from both Madrid and abroad.
→ Argumosa, 33.
M: Lavapiés.

FABRICA MARAVILLAS

Not just one of Madrid's best breweries, the 'Factory of Wonders' is also one of Malasaña's first microbreweries, with a large variety of high-quality beers served in its attractive brewpub.
→ Valverde, 29. M: Gran Vía.

LA CASA DE LA CERVEZA

With over 30 years' experience, this bar features more than 30 beers on tap and over 150 in bottles, ranging from Madrid craft beer to Belgian and German brews. It's also a great place for watching sport.
→ Luchana, 5. M: Bilbao.

TOP 3

Irish pubs in Madrid

The Irish Rover

One of Madrid's most famous Irish pubs, this place is known not only for its range of beers and its unbeatable location next to the Castellana, but also its frequent gigs and music performances.

Offering a typical Irish-bar atmosphere, it's a good spot for meeting up with friends to watch a match, too.

→ Av. de Brasil, 7. M: Santiago Bernabéu.

Finnegans

Finnegans pub in Plaza de las Salesas has its own rugby team, the Madrid Lions, and shows the major games on its big screens. At the weekends it's always packed with people who flock here to enjoy a pint or two and the (mostly rock) DJ sessions.

The James Joyce Irish Pub

Right in the city centre, next to Plaza de Cibeles, this Irish bar offers Guinness and Murphy's on tap, pub grub, chatty Irish (and Spanish) waiting staff, and rugby and Premier League matches on its enormous screens. Interestingly, the James Joyce used to be the Café Lion, a favourite writers' haunt in the post-Civil War years.

→ Alcalá, 59. M: Banco de España.

BY THE GLASS

Beyond beer: from wine to vermouth

TABERNA AVERÍAS

On Madrid's coolest foodie street, this bar offers dozens of wines from key Spanish regions and further afield.

WHY GO?

For the wide variety of wines served by the glass at reasonable prices and its young and trendy atmosphere.

M: Alonso Cano.

Alongside beer, Madrid's bars also have a great selection of wine and vermouth – a drink that's growing increasingly popular. We pick a couple of places to enjoy each one:

LA CHULA DE CHAMBERÍ is one of the best examples of the new style of Madrid bar, with a selection of tempting wines and well-chosen produce prepared skilfully and simply. There are cured meats, stews and toasts with various toppings, served at a few high tables and one big table for eight.

→ Fernando el Santo, 11. M: Alonso Martínez.

LA VIOLETA is a refurbished tavern – now all marble and painted shelves – in the traditional Madrid neighbourhood of Chamberí. It sells over 30 vermouths, which go perfectly with its smoked or pickled anchovies, cheeses and other dishes and great atmosphere.

→ Vallehermoso, 62. M: Canal.

BODEGAS LA ARDOSA – not to be confused with La Ardosia in Malasaña – is a minuscule bar with a beautiful tiled exterior and an interior lined with wine bottles. The patatas bravas and fried pork belly are very good, the beer comes in big glasses, and the vermouth on tap is delicious.

→ Santa Engracia, 70. M: Iglesia.

COCKTAIL BARS

Three G&Ts

MUSEO CHICOTE

The walls are covered in photos of the bar's famous visitors

Museo Chicote

→ Gran Vía, 12. M: Gran Vía.

Since it was opened by famous Spanish cocktail waiter Pedro Chicote in 1931, this bar has been renowned for its delicious cocktails, fun atmosphere and glamorous international clientele, as well as its exclusive and raucous parties. Almost 90 years on, Chicote is still a unique part of Madrid's nightlife, attracting all types of people in search of a great gin and tonic and a special vibe. There's also a menu of snacks to pair with the nearly 50 cocktails on offer, which include the mai-tai, the Hemingway and the Alaska.

Salmon Guru

→ Echegaray, 21. M: Gran Vía.

Enjoy cocktail master Diego Cabrera's most popular creations at this chic, modern and beautifully decorated bar. There are 25 classic drinks to choose from, from G&Ts to numerous original creations that have earned this place its fame.

Macera

→ San Mateo, 21. M: Alonso Martínez.

An industrial-style cocktail bar and café where barman Narciso Bermejo has recovered the original essence of the gin and tonic. The cocktail menu comprises ten classics created using Macera's own in-house-distilled spirits. A bar with a difference.

WHERE TO EAT

SANDWICHES

Bao Bar

Bao buns are still all the rage and at this place they're delicious, with fillings such as shredded duck, cucumber, spring onion and hoisin sauce, or falafel, tahini and salad. They go great with a beer and the prices are reasonable.

→ Corredera Alta de San Pablo, 2. M: Callao.

La Sanducherie

A well-organised space with a mix of high and low tables and a young and relaxed atmosphere. The service is friendly and the tasty baguettes include Thai chicken, the Cubano mi Hermano, and the Adoro el Pomodoro. There's craft beer, too.

→ Luchana, 1. M: Bilbao.

Crumb

This place defines itself as Madrid's spot for haute cuisine sandwiches. It takes a lot of care over the bread, which is kneaded, shaped and baked every day with organic flour and sourdough starter. There's wheat bread, bread with seeds, potato, honey and onion, rye bread... all filled with the freshest ingredients to make gourmet creations that are all its own.

→ Conde Duque, 8.

M: Noviciado.

John Barrita

From Javi Estévez of La Tasquería (who supplies the meat and more) and John Edward Torres of La Panotheca (who supplies the organic bread), this sandwich and tapas joint offers a relaxed style and lavishly designed backdrop. Open to all, the space is all exposed brick walls, wood and big windows, while the service is efficient and friendly.

→ Vallehermoso, 72. M: Canal.

El porrón canalla

Nina Lafhchenova and May Nocon have set up a lively and simple fast-food joint selling meatballs (beef, pork or chicken) in brioche buns prepared with love, lots of flavour and, if you dare try the Fireball, a spicy hit you'll never forget. Happily, the duo have also taken vegans into account, and the dishes all

La Casa Tomada

Without doubt, this place sells the most lavish baguettes in Madrid. Real food porn. And the same goes for the rest of its dishes, including the chilli cheese fries – chips topped with chilli con carne, melted cheddar, jalapeño peppers, red onion, a fried egg, coriander and bacon. Pure greed!

→ San Lorenzo, 9. M: Chueca.

come with chips, rice or pasta. The desserts, meanwhile, are just as homemade as their meatballs and tend to come in generous portions.

→ Conchas, 3. M: Callao.

CHINESE

Lamian

Lamian by Soy Kitchen takes you on a journey through the most traditional specialities from China, Taiwan, Korea and Japan, all fused together into authentic Asian street food by the imagination and skill of chef Yong Ping Zhang (aka Julio). The décor is attractive, while the ramen is unbeatable – a soup of well-balanced flavours and a light and vibrant texture.

→ Plaza de los Mostenses, 4. M: Callao.

XiangZili

The guo qiao mi xian (crossing the bridge noodles) served here would rival Asterix's cauldron of magic potion for potency and flavour. Looking like a speakeasy, this restaurant from the people behind the lively KungFu serves up the spicy cuisine of Yunnan province.

→ Libreros, 18.

Shanghai Mama

This place's incredibly tasty ku bak rice with chicken, seafood and egg is one of the best around. None of its range of dumplings is likely to disappoint, either – to choose one, the xialongbao made from meat and black truffles is as delicate as it is explosive. It would also be wrong to leave without trying its famous hot and sour soup and traditional crispy duck with almond and cherry sauce. For dessert, the fried banana is a good option – and lighter than it looks.

→ Infanta Mercedes, 62.

M: Tetuán.

PERUVIAN

Tiradito

The ceviche and raw fish at this bar are something special, all prepared with ingredients from across Peru's three regions by chef Omar Malpartida, a star of Peruvian cuisine. It's also excellent value for money.

→ Conde Duque, 13.

M: San Bernardo.

La Cevichería

With a name derived from combining two of Peruvian cuisine's most representative dishes – ceviche and anticuchos – this place is the creation of chef Miguel Ángel Valdiviezo and Melina Salas, the pair behind Madrid's first ceviche restaurant, Tampu, now in Calle Prim. Here the space is divided between the bar and a dining area with low-level tables.

→ Téllez, 20.

M: Menéndez Pelayo

Quispe

This place doesn't skimp on the quality of its produce – bluefin tuna for the tiradito shiso and Galician beef for the lomo saltado (marinated steak with veg and fried potatoes). There are also hot and cold dishes, nods to Peruvian nikkei and chifa fusion cuisine and a selection of original tapas made from the recipes of top chef friends. The décor provides a window on the country's acerbic art and culture that runs parallel to the diversity served up on your plate.

→ Orellana, 1.

M: Alonso Martínez.

MEXICAN

María Bonita

Comfortable, good and cheap, this place is one of those honest and homespun taco bars that wants nothing more than for you to spend a fun hour enjoying the dishes arrive at your table – a soup, a prickly-pear salad, a side of tacos...

→ Duque de Liria, 9.

M: Ventura Rodríguez.

Mawey

Run by two experienced chefs who make everything on the premises, including the tortillas, this taco bar continues to raise classics to new levels (such as the succulent cochinita pibil and impeccable suadero) and to separate itself from the pack with unusual recipes – the gobernador tacos are sensational. But Mawey best demonstrates its uniqueness in the form of its constantly revolving list of exquisite fillings, such as pig's ear and duck carnitas.

→ Olid, 6. M: Quevedo.

Mestizo

This place does nachos, quesadillas with various fillings and more than ten types of taco. But it also does tamales, nopales and stews such as duck in mole sauce with cherry and walnuts. We especially recommend the molcajete mestizo (there are chicken, beef, vegetarian and prawn versions) – a huge stone pot filled with avocado, chorizo, cheese, onion, coriander and salsa.

→ Recoletos, 13. M: Retiro.

JAPANESE

Yokaloka

One of the first Japanese food stalls in the Mercado de Antón Martín, this has become a hotspot for all things Japan in the city centre, with freshly prepared sushi, ramen and other specialities. Both its bar and its tables are always full.

→ Santa Isabel, 5.

M: Antón Martín.

Miki

Don't expect fantastically original creations, makis loaded with stylistic flourishes or a menu with infinite options here – this is no-frills cooking. A classic Japanese restaurant that comes at you head on, it's sure to win over those most devoted to this cuisine in its purest form.

→ Duque de Sevilla, 4.

M: Cruz del Rayo.

Kappo

If it wasn't because you'd come here to try the food and the Tasmanian trout nigiri you've just picked up with your fingers is providing a tempting introduction to his omakase sushi, you could end up mesmerised by chef Mario Payán's movements behind the counter here. He prepares sushi with the harmony, firmness and precision of a martial art.

→ Bretón de los Herreros, 54.

ITALIAN

Don Lisander

This trattoria with its delicious thin-crust pizzas and home-made pasta marks the peak of transalpine cooking in Madrid. Don't miss its 'bruschette' of eggs with truffle and its spectacular tiramisú.

→ Infanta Mercedes, 92. M:

Valdeacederas.

Fornería Ballaró

Featuring a wood-fired oven, this place serves up amazing Sicilian dishes, including kebabs made from porchetta, Segovian suckling pig, rocket and mayonnaise; potato and Sardinian sausage croquettes; rice balls stuffed with ragu, peas and mozzarella and, of course, spectacular pizzas.

→ Santa Engracia, 90. M: Canal

PIZZAS

Fratelli Figurato

The very sharp and exacting Riccardo and Vittorio closed the door on their former lives to open this welcoming and popular Neapolitan pizzeria. They've now won over half the neighbourhood with their Italian soundtrack, their light and alternative doughs – everything from long fermentation to wholemeal, multicereal and seeded – and their heat-resistant stone pizza oven that maintains all the qualities of a traditional wood-fired one.

→ Alonso Cano, 37.

M: Alonso Cano.

Éccolo

At the back, in a bright space with extraordinary windows, a huge wood-fired oven absorbs the constant coming and going of pizzas here. All of them are organic, made from select ingredients and of a good size – you won't want to give up even half a slice of one to leave room for the piattini (sbriciolona toscana, caponata, coppa...) or panna cotta. There's also an enviable range of craft beers.

→ Embajadores, 28.

M: La Latina

TRADITIONAL

Los Galayos

You'll find praiseworthy quantities of honesty, diligence and exacting know-how at this place off Plaza

Mayor. The cooking is based on Castilian traditional and roast suckling pig is one of the house specialities. If you don't want to venture into the restaurant on your first visit, try one of the dishes at the bar.

→ Botoneras, 5. M: Sol.

Cruz Blanca

Its cocido served in two parts is famous and has received both the praise of critics and numerous rewards. It takes around 15 hours to make, carefully adding each ingredient – the ham, the bone marrow, the beef, the bacon... – step by step.

→ Carlos Martín Álvarez, 58. M: Portazgo.

Botín
Still standing after almost 300 years, the world's oldest restaurant is famous for its suckling pig and lamb. Hemingway ate here, too.
→ Cuchilleros, 17. M: La Latina.

VEGETARIAN

La Encomienda
A large space in Lavapiés with a bar and dining room where almost everything is gluten-free and with many good raw food and vegan options. There's also a set lunch menu and a brunch is available at weekends.
→ Encomienda, 19. M: Tirso de Molina.

Pizzi & Dixie
Botanique, the vegan eatery in the Mercado de Antón Martín, wasn't big enough for chef Nacho Sánchez, so he went off to explore new horizons. Pizzas and other Italian dishes are the pillars of his cooking and his veganism and passion for healthy eating are still every much in evidence on the menu at his Malasaña joint.
→ San Vicente Ferrer, 16. M: Tribunal.

Vega
This place is bustling and loud but comfy and pleasant. Ingredients are locally sourced, organic, or fair trade, and the service is good.
→ Luna, 9. M: Santo Domingo

FUSION

Kitchen 154
If you like spicy dishes, Asian street food or eating at lively bar counters (though you can also book a table), you'll love this venue in the Mercado de Vallehermoso. Music, flaming woks, high-speed kitchen coordination and more...
→ Vallehermoso, 36. M: Quevedo.

Latasia
This venue spans everywhere from Lima to Bangkok with a stopover in Singapore.

New York Burger
Falta texto en inglés This hamburger joint boasts a non-stop kitchen at weekends and a menu that lets you choose between 200g and 400g versions or special options including salmon and veggie falafel burgers. Our pick is the Vancouver, which comes in a brioche bun with provolone cheese, mushrooms, truffle → Carranza, 10. M: Bilbao.

We highly recommend the sweetbreads (addictive), chilli crab (with a sauce you'll want to keep spreading and spreading), pig's ear (finely sliced and with an attractive glaze) and the dim sum of the day.
→ Paseo de la Castellana, 115. M: Cuzco.

StreetXO
The street food version of chef David Muñoz's three-Michelin-starred DiverXO restaurant. You'll be hard pressed to experience such a vibrant atmosphere and unusual tastes anywhere else.
→ Serrano, 52. M: Rubén Darío.

HAMBURGERS

Goiko Grill
Constantly growing, Goiko is now one of Madrid's most popular burger bars, leaving chains such as Five Guys and New York Burger far behind with its quality meat and low prices.

→ Bilbao, 3. M: Bilbao.

Meat
There's just one solitary hamburger on the menu here. OK, there are also fries and onion rings to go with it, but nothing else. Choose how you want the ecological meat of your Royale with cheese cooked and it'll serve/wrap it up for you in a sheet of brown paper big enough to fit all your sauces and sides.
→ Santa Teresa, 4. M: Alonso Martínez.

GASTRO BARS

Recreo
Just one look at the classic starters (gilda skewers, stuffed mussels...) is enough to give you an idea of the approach at this fresh and glossy place. Everything looks familiar and delicious, and everything is about Spanish comfort food (creamy rice, breadcrumbs, pork, cheese boards). But there's also a clever touch that lifts each dish.

→ Espartinas, 5. M: Goya.

El ingrediente
Headed up by two young chefs, David Gutiérrez and Miguel Ángel López, this is a small project in a small space – many of the dishes are finished behind the bar, giving birth to a new concept: a neighbourhood restaurant with a chef's counter. The pair have cut their teeth in various other interesting restaurants in the capital, but here is where their careers are taking off and they're putting what they've learnt to the test.
→ Alenza, 5. M: Ríos Rosas.

ASIAN

TukTuk
Authentic Asian street food is the speciality here, with the delights including Indonesian rendang, Malaysian satay kebabs, the Sexy Siao Bao from the Philippines, Vietnamese pho soup and several legendary curries, including gaeng phet from Thailand. There are Asian cocktails, too.

→ Barquillo, 26. M: Chueca.

Yakitoro
Spanish celeb chef Alberto Chicote's reinterpretation of a classic Japanese bar.
→ Reina, 41. M: Banco de España.

HAUTE CUISINE

Punto MX
Mixing tradition and the avant-garde, this one-Michelin-starred restaurant adds a modern touch to classic Mexican recipes without losing a pinch of their flavour.
→ General Pardiñas, 40. M: Lista.

Dstage
Chef Diego Guerrero practises his freestyle cooking at this two-Michelin-starred restaurant crisscrossed by metal pipes and with the kitchen in view at the back.
→ Regueros, 8. M: Chueca.

La Cabra
With young chef Javier Aranda in charge of the kitchen, this spot is arguably one of Madrid's best and most stylish restaurants.
→ Francisco de Rojas, 2. M: Bilbao.

Foodie Markets

The typical stalls are giving way to a vibrant and diverse culinary showcase

San Miguel

Madrid's most central market was also the first to undergo a gourmet transformation. It's retained its early twentieth-century iron structure but the interior is now abuzz with revamped stalls. Although you can still shop here, most of its visitors, mainly tourists, come here for a drink, lunch or dinner. The choice is almost unlimited.

→ Plaza de San Miguel, 3. M: Sol.

Vallehermoso

The quality and quantity of the cuisines piled up under this market's roof have made it one of the most interesting in the city. You have everything from fusion cooking by top chefs to spicy delights, Canarian delicacies, Asturian classics, top-class fried pork belly, craft beer to suit all tastes and probably the best pastrami sandwich you'll find anywhere in Madrid.

→ Vallehermoso, 32. M: Quevedo.

San Antón

You'll always be able to come here to buy first-class produce – charcuterie, meat, fish, fruit and veg – but its roof terrace remains its biggest draw. Even so, you'll do well to take the round-the-world trip offered by its food stalls before sitting down for a drink.

→ Augusto Figueroa, 24B. M: Chueca.

Antón Martín

Lavapiés is changing at the same pace as this market. Japanese, Italian and Mexican joints plus a couple of places to enjoy a drink share space with stalls selling everything from ecological goods to cereals of all colours and seaweed.

→ Santa Isabel, 5. M: Antón Martín.

San Ildefonso

In the heart of Malasaña's main shopping area, this three-storey market is devoted to international gastronomy and great atmosphere. There are around 20 stalls for ordering a bite to eat, two semi-covered terrace areas and three bars.

→ Fuencarral, 57. M: Tribunal.

Mostenses

South American and Asian stalls come together in this market where you can try authentic Peruvian cuisine or buy that Chinese vegetable you normally only eat in restaurants.

→ Plaza de los Mostenses. M: Plaza de España.

San Fernando

The character of this neighbourhood market has changed more slowly than that of some of the others here. Now,

12 Chiles (M. La Paz)

Tripea (M. Vallehermoso)

The changing Antón Martín market now features Japanese, Italian and Mexican joints next to tapas stalls and more next to the regular stalls that are reinventing themselves at weekends, there are those selling natural wine and Greek, Portuguese, Japanese and Italian food.

→ Embajadores, 41. M: Lavapiés.

La Paz

Joining the legendary Casa Dani at this market, you'll now find a taco stand, a trattoria and gourmet food stalls serving portions to try right there and then.

→ Ayala, 28. M: Serrano.

A region worth seeing

The towns and places around Madrid are home to a host of architectural, natural and historic wonders

ARANJUEZ

The southernmost town in the Madrid region, Aranjuez is a charming place that you can travel to on the local Cercanías train network. Its Palacio Real is worth a visit, as are the beautiful gardens, which have been declared a Unesco World Heritage site.

→www.aranjuez.es

PATONES DE ARRIBA

Patones de Arriba is best known for its 'black architecture', which uses the abundant local black slate. First constructed in the sixteenth century, the town makes the most of each side of the mountain to create a unique farming village.

→www.patones.net

CHINCHÓN

The fifteenth-century Plaza Mayor is this small medieval town's main attraction. It's surrounded by three-storey buildings with angular galleries and over 230 wooden balconies, all painted green.

→ww.chinchon.es

SAN LORENZO DE EL ESCORIAL

The town's huge monastery, Felipe II's pet project and built between 1563 and 1584, has been declared a World Heritage site and is the main reason to visit. If you do, be sure to try the Montia restaurant.

→www.elescorial.es

GUADARRAMA NATIONAL PARK

Encompassing 30,000 hectares and 11 ecosystems, this protected area is one of the most-visited natural spaces in Madrid and Segovia.

BUITRAGO DE LOZOYA

This town in the Sierra de Guadarrama has one of the best preserved walls in the region – they're now considered a National Monument.

→www.buitragodelozoya.es

ALCALÁ DE HENARES

Declared a Unesco World Heritage site in 1998, this charming town to the east of Madrid is famous for its university and as the birthplace of 'Don Quixote' author Miguel de Cervantes.

Just a stone's throw away

Madrid is the perfect point from which to visit other nearby cities full of fascinating attractions and history

1 Toledo

Seventy-two kilometres from Madrid and just 25 minutes on the AVE high-speed train lies Toledo, the capital of Castilla-La Mancha and the old capital of the Kingdom of Spain. The city sits on the River Tagus and is famous for its Alcázar, Santa María cathedral, old Jewish quarter, the San Juan de los Reyes monastery, the San Martín bridge and the Puerta Nueva de Bisagra. In short, it's not to be missed.

→ www.toledo.es

2 Segovia

Heading to Segovia, just an hour from Madrid, means visiting its aqueduct, the most important example of Roman civil engineering in Spain. It also means trying its famous suckling pig – at Casa Cándido, if you can, to see how they slice up the tender meat with a plate. It's well worth taking a relaxed stroll round the aqueduct and the old quarter. A city brimming with charm that's little more than half an hour from Madrid on the AVE.

→ www.segovia.es

4 Ávila

Ávila is famous for its Romanesque wall, which was built at the end of the eleventh century and surrounds the city's old quarter. It's also known as the resting place of the remains of Santa Teresa de Jesús, a sixteenth-century nun who was born in the town, and for being Spain's highest provincial capital at 1,131m above sea level.

→ www.avila.es

3 Cuenca

Cuenca is famous for its Hanging Houses (Casas Colgadas), of which you can visit three: the two Casas del Rey, home to the Museum of Spanish Abstract Art, and the Casa de la Sirena, which houses a restaurant. Another unmissable stop just outside Cuenca is the Ciudad Encantada, with its spectacular natural rock formations shaped over thousands of centuries.

→ www.cuenca.es

5 Salamanca

About two hours' drive from Madrid, Salamanca is best-known as a university town. Its limestone architecture is unique, and there are many impressive buildings to see, such as the main university building, with its frog statue hidden, and the Plaza Mayor. Its historic old town is one of the prettiest in Spain.

→ www.salamanca.es

6 Burgos

Burgos is home to one of the country's most spectacular gothic cathedrals, built over 800 years ago and the city's main tourist attraction. Barely 15 minutes outside of town, you'll also find the fascinating Atapuerca archeological site, which is a must-visit. In terms of cuisine, the city is famous for its morcilla blood sausage – don't leave without trying some.

→ www.burgos.es

7 Córdoba

Just two hours by train from Madrid, Córdoba is one of Spain's richest historical cities. The Mosque-Cathedral is a crucible of Arab and Christian cultures. A getaway you can round off with a visit to the Medina Azahara archaeological complex, also a World Heritage site.
